United States to Extend Gold Plan to Foreign Markets

REHABILITATION OF SILVER

Congress Leaders Demand Action

Washington, Oct. 29.
The "Silver Congressmen" announce that they will meet in the middle of November to formulate a united programme for action to rehabilitate silver unless President Roosevelt makes a move to stabilise the metal.

In the meantime a group composed of Senators Thomas, King, Wheeler and Pittman intends to press for congressional action immediately when Congress meets in January with an emergency programme and a permanent plan to be advocated concurrently.—Reuter.

ARAB PROTESTS

ARRESTED LEADERS TO BE KEPT IN GAOL

A QUIET DAY

Jerusalem, Oct. 29.
Palestine was quieter to-day though there were occasional incidents and an atmosphere exists which suggests the possibility of further disorders.

All Arab prisoners were remanded in custody for fifteen days by the British magistrate at Acre to-day.

In the meantime, the mood of the Arabs is revealed by a resolution passed at a meeting of the Arab Executive, protesting against the alleged illegal firing by the police at Jaffa, demanding the immediate release of the Arab leaders, and declaring their intention of sending a protest to the Arab Kings and the League of Nations.

It is reported from Damascus that as a result of the developments in Palestine, all Arab newspapers have been suspended.—Reuter.

ELECTION MARRED BY BLOODSHED

DISTURBANCES IN MADRID

Madrid, Oct. 26.
The Spanish election fight to-day was marked by violent disturbances, the police being obliged in many places in the capital to use their revolvers. Last evening, bloodshed occurred in scuffles between the Socialists and the Extremists of the Left. The list of casualties during the past few days includes several dead and many badly injured people.

NAZI SABOTAGE ATTEMPT

VIENNA RADIO STATION ATTACKED

Vienna, Oct. 26.
A group of unknown people, believed to be members of the National Socialist Party, last night made an attempt to damage the wireless station at Bisamberg, a Vienna suburb. They were, however, prevented from raiding the premises by members of the Austrian auxiliary police, who fired shots at them. The invaders escaped, carrying their wounded comrades with them. Pursuit was organised by the police, but no one was caught.

SUDDEN CHANGE OF PLAN

SECRECY ENJOINED AFTER LONG CONFERENCE

WASHINGTON "NERVES"

NEW YORK, OCT. 29.
A CRISIS IS THREATENING IN ADMINISTRATIVE CIRCLES. THE GOLD PLAN HAS FAILED MISERABLY IN ITS FIRST OBJECTIVES. PURCHASE OF GOLD ABROAD HAS NOW BEEN ORDERED.

The White House correspondent of the New York Herald-Tribune reports that the attitude in N.I.R.A. circles is compounded of "confusion and watchful waiting" regarding the first week's results of the gold plan.

There are rumours of resignations and of a general shake-up at the Treasury and the Federal Reserve Board.

It is learned that Mr. Acheson, the Under-Secretary of the Treasury Department, offered legal opinion which President Roosevelt ignored in announcing the gold plan.

The Washington Post declares that President Roosevelt is even prepared to declare an outright cut in the gold content of the dollar is the experiment continues to be inconclusive.—Reuter.

PRESIDENT GETTING DESPERATE?

Washington, Oct. 29.
President Roosevelt has authorised the purchase of gold abroad, thus reversing a decision reached only four days ago to delay this phase of his gold plan.

The object of such purchases can only be to influence foreign currencies.

It is also understood that the President plans to gradually increase the price of gold in the pected to be made through the Reconstruction Finance Corporation.

There are hints that the President is considerably disappointed by the failure of his gold policy to appreciably affect the price of commodities.

GOLD PRICES.

The Washington Post, the proprietor of which is Mr. Eugene Meyer, the former Governor of the Federal Reserve Board, also reports that President Roosevelt's advisers are also disappointed by the manner in which prior calculations regarding the effect of the gold policy announcement has misfired.

It adds that they now mean to raise the gold price slowly from $31.36 an ounce to $34.34 a fine ounce, which would be equivalent to a fifty per cent. cut in the gold content of the dollar.—Reuter.

There is every indication that the U.S. Administration is tending to become more radical and capital is likely to be controlled in addition to wages, prices and production.

The criticisms of business men that capital cannot be employed owing to uncertainty and new legislation controlling fresh issues are countered by the statement that the free use of money is no longer permitted.

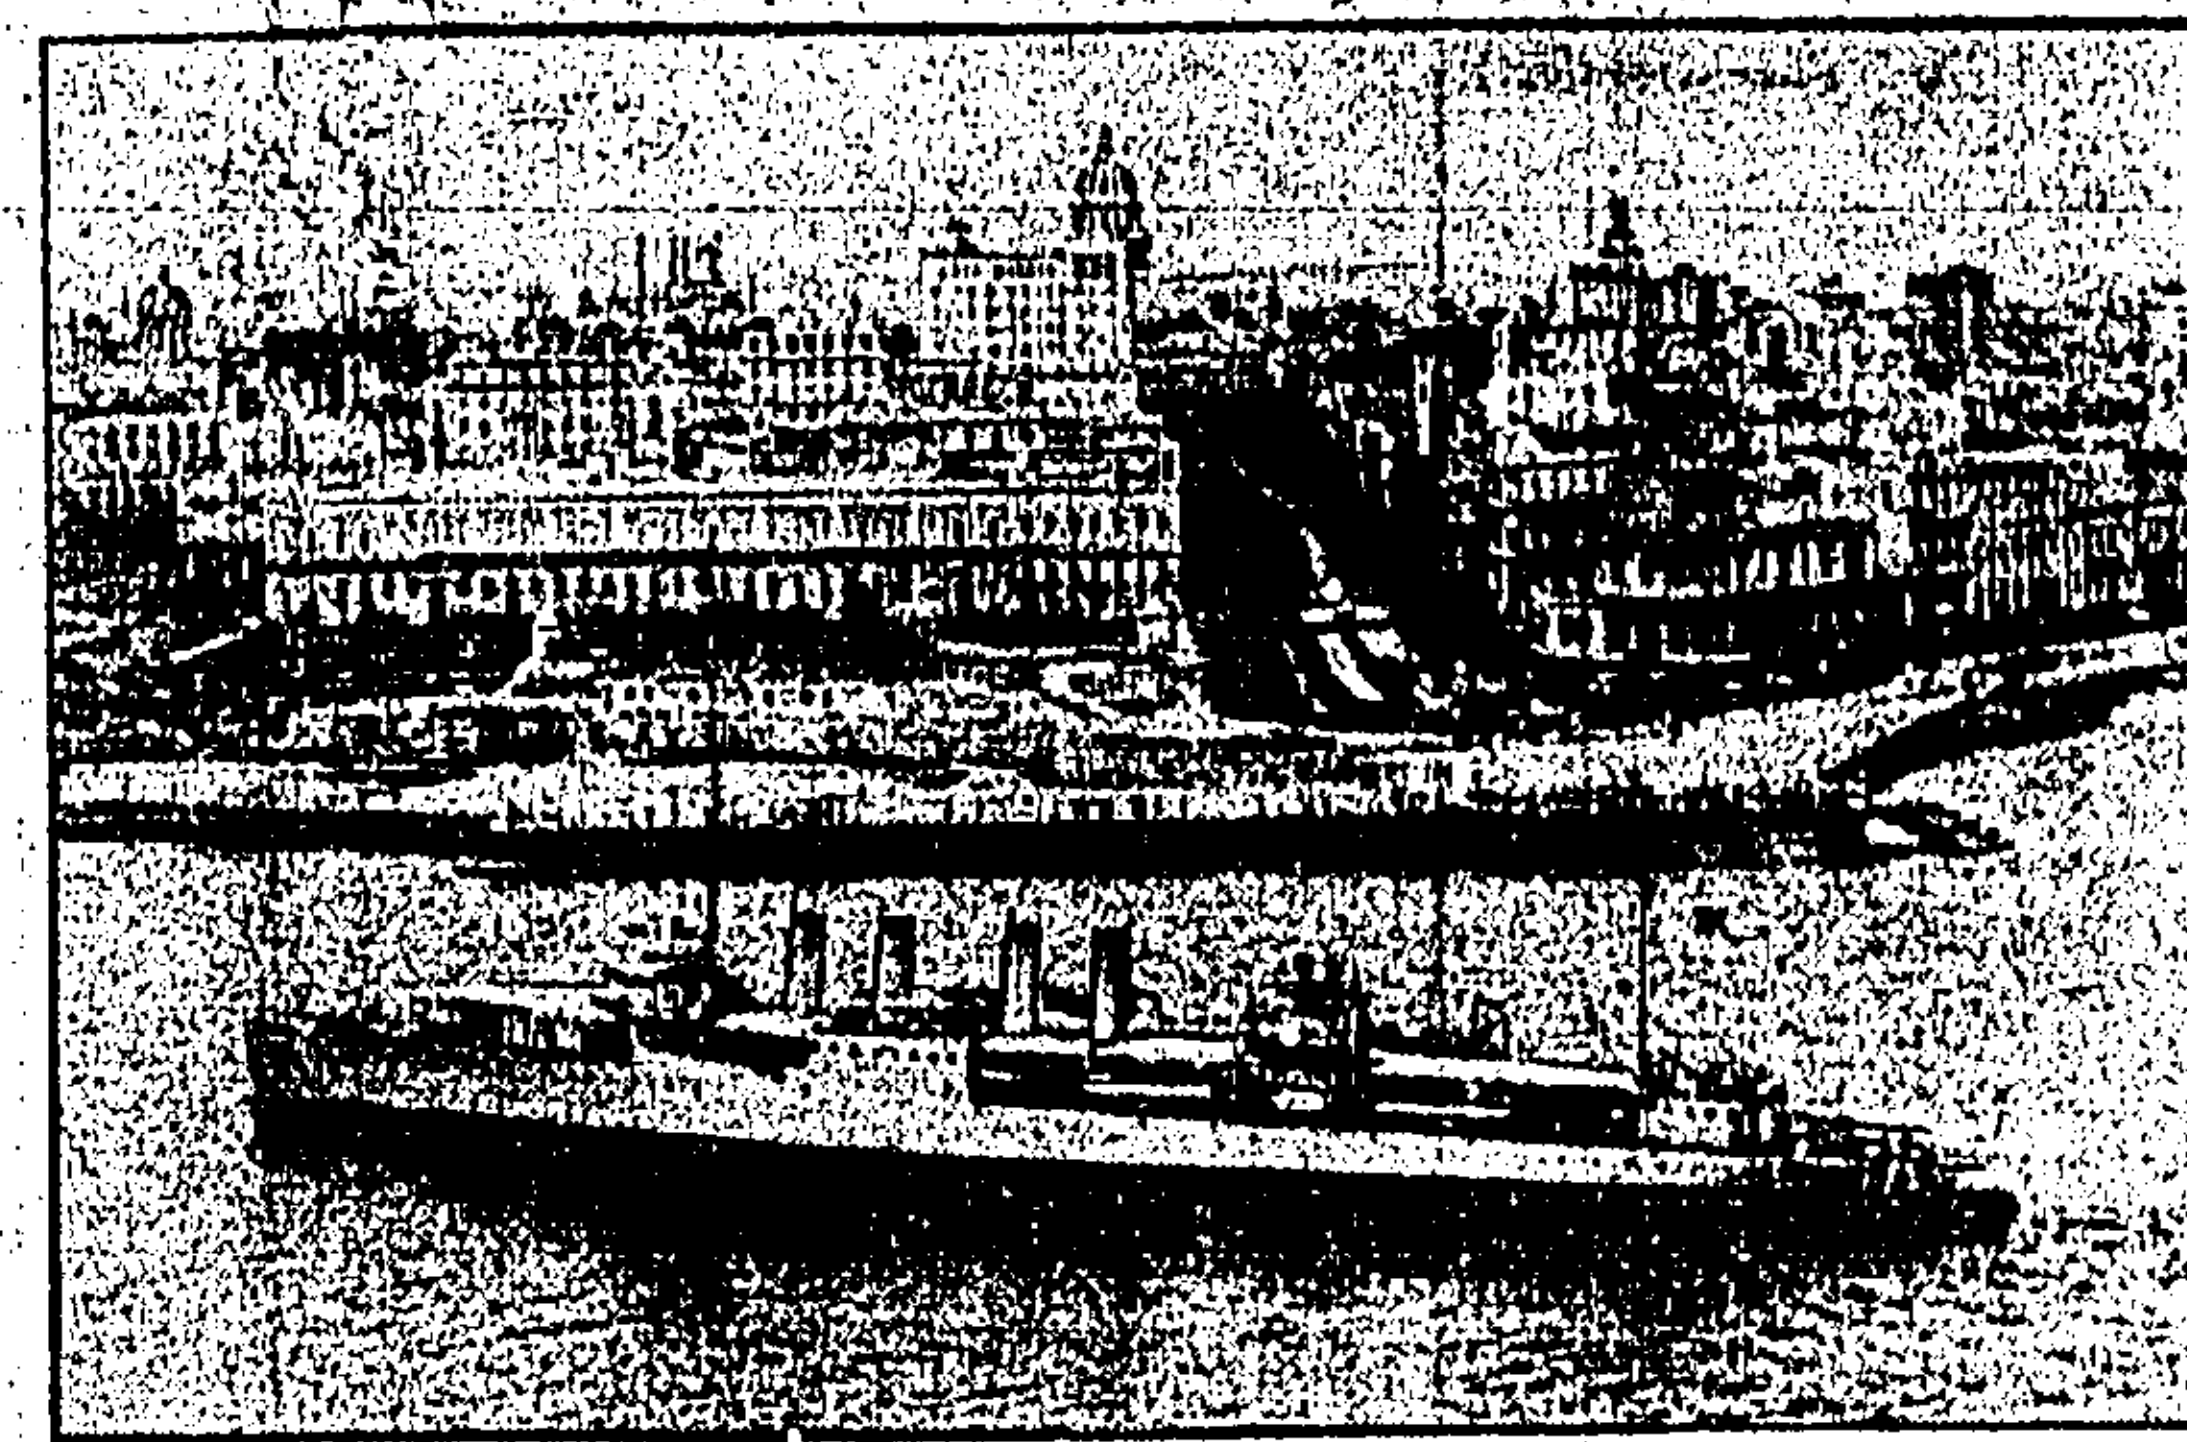

This encourages the belief that financial houses, the stock exchange and produce exchanges will be subjected to drastic regulation.

STATISTICS.

Meanwhile figures gathered by the conference of statisticians show that the increase in distribution and manufactures during September was less than the normal seasonal increase. The total volume of sales declined by ten per cent. compared with 1932.

The energetic "Buy Now" campaign now proceeding to combat this decline has shown good results, but the aim has not been achieved. It is thought that the check to business is a reaction from the artificial boom early in the summer.

The R.M.S. "Empress of Asia" left Yokohama on Saturday at 3 p.m. and is due at Vancouver on Monday, November 6.

With another crisis threatening, only a few American warships are stationed in Cuban waters. Photo shows a destroyer lying in Havana Harbour, with the Dome of the Capitol in the background, centre, and the President's Palace at left.

ANNEXATION DENIED

REPORT RIDICULED IN TOKYO

PU-YI AS EMPEROR

According to a recent Chinese press report, the Japanese Government has decided to abolish the Manchoukio Government and to annex Manchuria as an integral part of the Japanese Empire.

January 1, 1934, it was added, would probably be the day on which the change would be carried out. This report is denied and ridiculed by Japanese officials and others.

While however, Japan's annexation of Manchuria is considered extremely unlikely—especially as matters are at present—there are indications that certain changes and developments are possible in the comparatively near future.

Two recent events seem to bear closely on this possibility.

One was the arrival in Japan of Dr. Chao Hsin-po, chief of the Legislative Yuan of Manchoukio, to carry out a close study of the Japanese Constitution and parliamentary system, and

The other was the appointment on October 17, of Major-Gen. Genji Doihara—whose activities in the early stages of the Manchurian trouble won him the title of "the Japanese Lawrence of Manchuria"—as chief of the Mukden "Special Services Bureau."

SOONER OR LATER.

In a press interview given on his arrival in Tokyo, Dr. Chao, who is a Japanese-educated lawyer with a

NEW CUBAN CRISIS THREATENING

SAN MARTIN REGIME COLLAPSING: STRIKE MENACE

CRITICAL SITUATION

Havana, Oct. 29.

Another crisis is threatening in Cuba and the collapse of the San Martin Government may occur at any moment.

It has been crumbling for days. The growing labour unrest, which has culminated in a three-day nationwide strike of the transport, light, power and water services, may complete the wreckage.

A powerful section of the ABC revolutionary society threatens to withdraw its support, in which case the Cespedes Party may return to power.

Meanwhile, with labourers striking, the oil companies have declared a lock-out owing to the employers' refusal of some of the seventy demands made by the employees.

The Government seems to be quite helpless and is unable to secure control of the situation.

MALARIA SCOURGE.

There is a further complication in the alarming increase in intestinal malaria, fostered by the slackening off of sanitary measures. This is increasing the Government's difficulties and its collapse seems certain.

The Cabinet, in fact, handed in their joint resignations to the President, Dr. Grau San Martin, a few days ago, but the President decided to hold the matter in abeyance pending a new attempt at reconciling the warring factions by offering a semi-Parliamentary government.

CESPEDES TO RETURN.

There are no signs that this will prove acceptable and with a strong wing of the ABC threatening to withdraw support, the present regime seems doomed.

There are many who are confident that the Cespedes Party will shortly be reinstated, possibly with some assistance and protection from the United States.

ABC CHARGES.

The ABC organisation and the Students Association make charges against the Minister of Finance and other ministers who are accused of being incompetent to hold ministerial posts. The ministers concerned have offered to tender their resignations, but President Grau San Martin declared that he would study the situation and try to reconcile differences among the political parties.

The Chief of Police has reported to the Government that 150 workers have been arrested for creating disorders.

Railway tracks removed at Jovellanos of a distance of one kilometre, resulted in the interruption of the train service between the provinces of Matanzas and Santa Clara. Four trains ran off the tracks in the Matanzas province.

Eighteen workers' syndicates are reported to be ready to go on strike at any moment.

STUDENT DEMANDS.

Reinforcements are kept in readiness in police stations and soldiers have rearranged machine-guns and sandbags outside the presidential palace in connection with the strikes.

It is reported reliably that Dr. Grau's student supporters told him he must decide whether he or Col. Fulgencio Bautista, the former sergeant who now heads the army, is to be president.

They are said to have added that if Dr. Grau San Martin proposes to remain at the helm he must drop Secretary of the Interior Gutierrez from the cabinet and remove Chief of Police Ulpiano Franchas.

The political situation has been quiet recently, since the bloody battle at the National Hotel between the troops and barricaded former officers, leading to hopes that order might be maintained and United States diplomatic recognition extended to the Grau government.

Most of the American warships sent to Cuban waters in August and September have been withdrawn.

MR. T. V. SOONG'S RESIGNATION

ANXIETY IN SHANGHAI

RETURN URGED

Shanghai, Oct. 30.

The resignation of Mr. T. V. Soong has caused some feeling of alarm in Shanghai commercial and banking circles.

The Shanghai Chamber of Commerce and other public organisations have sent a telegram to the Central Government urging that no effort be spared to induce Mr. Soong to remain as China's Finance Minister.

They state that at this time of national crisis it is not wise to permit Mr. T. V. Soong to quit.

The Shanghai market has been seriously affected by Soong's move and it is urged that no effort be spared to induce Soong to change his mind.

They have also appealed directly to Mr. Soong, urging him to withdraw his resignation.

MR. SOONG'S REASONS.

The reason given for Mr. Soong's resignation is his disagreement with the Government's declared policy towards Japan, although other observers express the view that his inability to impress on Gen. Chiang Kai-shek the significance of the financial position in relation to military expenditure had its place in the decision. For a long time, the two leaders have been at variance on several points of policy. They were acutely out of accord at the time of the resignation of Marshal Chang Hsueh-ling and after Mr. Soong's much-discussed visit to Jehol. Matters were prevented from coming to a head and better relations were restored, but since Mr. Soong's return from Europe, disagreement constantly has reared its head.

KIANGSI TROUBLE.

Gen. Chiang Kai-shek's recent disappointments in Kiangsi have stirred in him resentment at the reluctance of Mr. Soong to disburse money for military operations. The situation is, of course, rendered more difficult by the unfavourable reports from Szechuan and the evident revival of the fortunes of Gen. Hu, who, with Gen. Hsu, operating in Szechuan, is now a formidable aspirant to power in the Yangtze Valley. Gen. Chu Teh in Kiangsi is another Red leader whose prominence is again noted, in the light of his recent exploits. Down south, Gen. Chan Chai-tang is said to be developing an independent policy and altogether the Government's troubles seem to be accumulating.—Reuter.

HOW DR. NIELSEN ESCAPED

AGED MISSIONARY SAFE AT HSIUYEN

Tokyo, Oct. 26.
An official despatch has reached the Foreign Office from Gen. Hishitani, Japanese Ambassador at Changchun, reporting in detail the release of the American missionary, Dr. Niels Nielsen, from bandits yesterday morning.

After Dr. Nielsen's capture in April last, the despatch says, a punitive expedition was started in conjunction with Japanese troops, but the bandits so frequently changed their base from mountain to mountain that the rescue work was rendered extremely difficult. When the Japanese garrison was later informed of the exact location of the bandits' lair, this place was surrounded. Taking advantage of the ensuing confusion, Dr. Nielsen escaped from the outlaws and reached Hsiuyen safely yesterday morning.—Reuter.

THE WORLD OF WOMEN

Boudoir Styles Buckle
Down to Organdy Belts

The newest note in tailored simplicity for the boudoir is a band which actually buckles on around the top of the skirt on your dressing table.

This dressing table, which has a charming skirt of red and blue plaid organdy, is ideal for a young girl's room. The bench matches the table.

GLORIFYING YOURSELF

By Alicia Hart

Include a few simple health rules in your beauty plans for fall. It is difficult to attain true beauty if you are not in good health. Shiny hair, smooth skin and a nice figure will probably be yours if you see that your body is in good condition.

Of course, you've heard many times that everyone should drink from eight to ten glasses of water every day. Do you do it? Begin with two full glasses of luke warm water in the morning.

Water cleanses the digestive tract and will often go far toward clearing a yellowish skin.

See your doctor frequently. Only a physician can tell you if there is anything organically wrong. But between visits to the doctor, map out a health routine for yourself.

Everyone needs exercise and most of us do not get nearly enough. Plan to walk part of this way to work each day and try to do a few simple sitting-up exercises when you get out of bed in the morning.

Cold showers stimulate a sluggish circulation. Take a cool shower every morning for a month and see if you don't feel better.

Swagger Suit

Coat linings go gay, this autumn. Some are brightly striped, others vivid, contrasting colours to give life to sombre outer things. Even when it's a cheery plaid suit, such as this blue and white plaid swagger suit that Helen Vinson wears, the coat lining is a brighter, arresting blue. The shirt-bouse, with its shiny buttons, matches the lining, which is another new wrinkle.

YOUR CHILDREN.

By Olive Roberts Barton

"Competition is the life of trade." Come to think of it, competition is the life of everything. It is the motive that keeps us interested in existence.

This is why it is good for children to play games. There is nothing selfish in trying to win. On the contrary, it is a very admirable quality.

Selfishness does not enter into it, however, when a child ceases to be a good loser—if he quits the game when he isn't ahead, or if he sulks, or gets mad. When that happens it is quite evident that he sets more store by his feelings than he should.

A Lost Opportunity.

At a picnic one day a little fellow left a peanut race and came back and sat down with his mother.

"What's wrong?" "I don't want to race any more. I'm tired."

"Who won?" "That boy with the red hair. He got a ball bat for a prize. He won the potato race and I'll bet he wins the sack race, too. No one else has a chance with him in it."

"Why don't you go into the other races with the younger boys?" "What do you think I am—a baby?"

"There! The sack race is beginning. Look! Oh, the red-headed boy fell. See—that fat one is ahead. Watch him go. For goodness sake—he's won it."

"That big dummy I didn't think he could win anything. I could beat him all hollow."

"If you'd stayed in perhaps you would have won. The races are all over now."

"Gee, I wish I'd stayed in," he declared.

This boy hasn't much idea of sportsmanship. Anything he cannot excel in loses its interest for him.

Learning to Excel.

If one has a child like this there is one way to change his point of view.

This is to try to get him to beat himself—his own record, rather.

Time him when he runs to the corner. Each trip let him try to cut a second or two off his own time. See how many times he can bat a ball and add one more hit each day to his score.

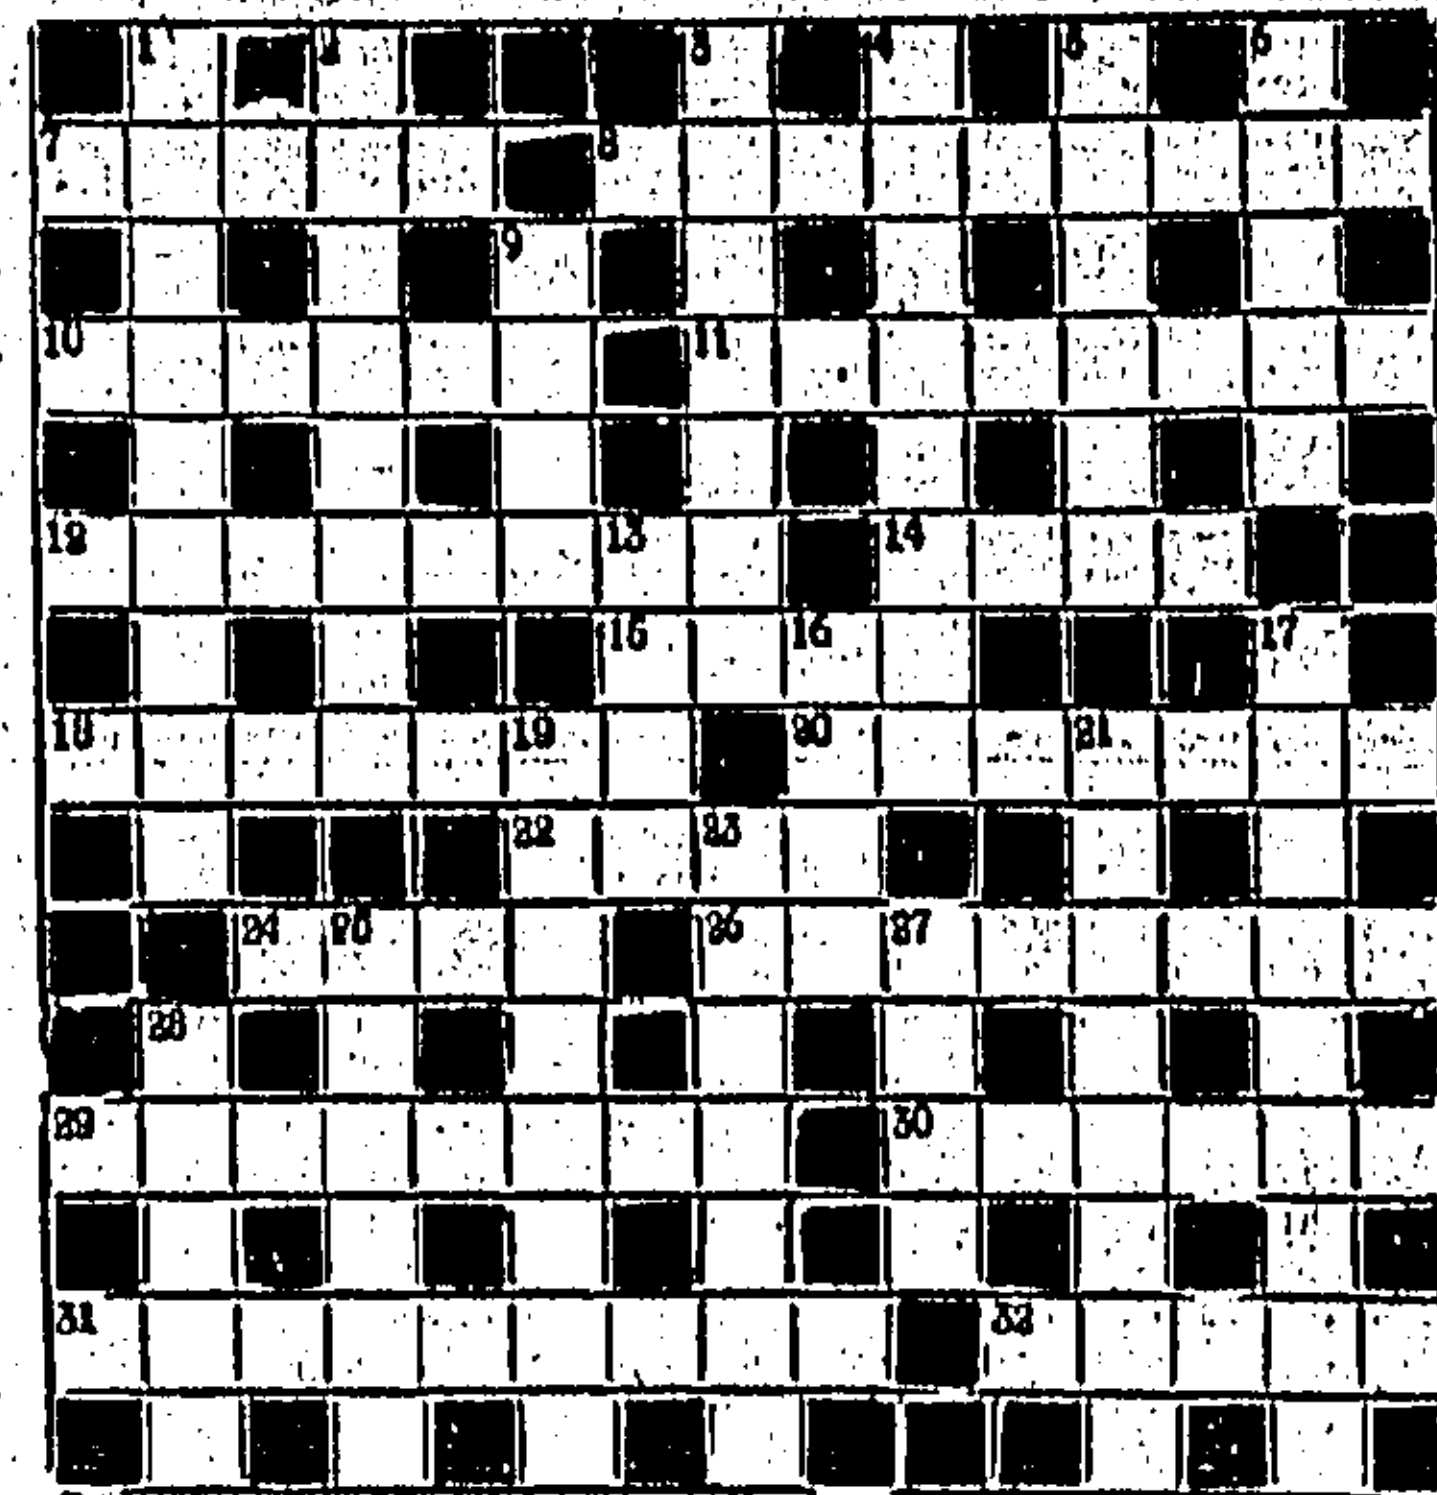

Encourage him to excel himself in as many ways as possible.

After a while his point of view changes. When he goes into games with other boys he will be interested in seeing how well he can do.

No boy becomes a good "teamer" until he loses that thin-skinned sensitiveness about failure.

Let him fix his mind on victory—yes. That is wholesome enough, but when he loses in fair play it will certainly be a fine thing if he says: "I lost, but I'll try to do better next time."

"SHADOWS BY THE SEA"

A Summer Mystery BY J. JEFFERSON FARJEON

CHAPTER XII.

"Preparations for a Jolly Evening."

An hour later, while Leonard Sefton was sitting on the edge of his bed, with his room in darkness, there came a soft tapping at the door, and Napoleon Truelove entered.

"Must it be dark?" queried Napoleon, his hand groping for the switch.

"It is preferable dark," replied Leonard, in a low voice, and Napoleon's hand dropped. "Close the door and don't talk loudly."

"Oh, anything to oblige," murmured Napoleon, as he obeyed. "We're going to have a thoroughly nasty, creepy time, so we might as well begin in style." The door was now closed, and he began to feel his way forward. "Do I sit down, or do you receive your visitors standing? I'll curtsy, if you like, and kiss your hand."

"Don't be an idiot," replied Leonard, smiling in the darkness. "I tell you, old chap, I've simply got to be an idiot," retorted the other. "It's the only way I can keep my pecker up."

"Yet I heard you shouting in the drawing-room that you had as much courage as anyone."

Napoleon chuckled. "That's true," he laughed. "Whatever sort of an ass I'm making of myself up here, it's nothing to the ass I made of myself down there. Luckily, Guy began chipping me, so that gave me a lead off. I told 'em that no one had a corner in courage, and that, if it came to a pinch, we could all do our share. I behaved like a jolly old fellow, and tootled out the trashiest tosh. As a matter of fact—"

"he paused for an instant—I really did feel just a tiny bit jealous when you went off with Miss Haines, you know. Not that I—oh, well, chuck all that! Anyway, I swore I'd row over to the wreck to-night for twopenny, and though nobody believed me for a moment, if I did do any such silly ass thing—well, there'd be no questions asked."

"You're a brick," answered Leonard, sincerely. "I'll stand sponsor for your courage, when the time comes."

"Don't be too sweetly sure," observed Napoleon, grimly. "The time hasn't come yet."

"But it will. And, meanwhile, I understand you've come to ask me where you can find a boat, and, learning of your insane intention, I insist on accompanying you."

"That's the plan," grinned Napoleon. "My courage cools somewhat, I expect, and when it comes to the point, I'm only too glad to accept the invitation of my rival to join the little party."

"You don't want the rival to go alone?" queried Leonard, with momentary doubt.

"I damn well do want the rival to go alone," answered Napoleon, "but for the honour of my panto-sne I ain't going to let him go alone. Besides, I've got a sort of a bet on with that fool Guy, and at least I stand to make five shillings out of this. I think I'll buy a tonic with it—"

"Sh! Don't talk so loudly," muttered Leonard, suddenly.

"Loudly? I wasn't—"

"Sh!"

Napoleon remained silent, obediently. What was the jolly idea, he wondered? This silence, and this sitting in the darkness.

"Hear anything?" whispered Leonard.

"You bet, I do," Napoleon whispered back. "It's going three hundred to the minute."

"Hear anything else?"

Napoleon listened. No, he heard nothing else. He was about to say so when a faint sound came from the wall to the right of the window.

"What is it?" he asked, in a low voice. "Cupboard door over there, isn't there?"

"It isn't a cupboard door. It's a door opening into the next room."

"Oh, Lord! I hope it's locked!"

"Of course, it's locked. But do you know who sleeps in the next room?"

"Yes. Old Griddle."

"Are you sure?"

"Quite. I know, because I had that room myself first, and gave it up when he came."

"Well, he's not asleep now—which a man with a headache ought to be," commented Leonard. "It seems to me Mr. Griddle spends all his evenings saying he's going to bed, but never getting there. He's been by that door for twenty minutes—"

"Unless it's a mouse?" suggested Napoleon.

"It's not a mouse."

"Well, p'raps you know mouse noises better than I do. Oh, Lord—here's an idea! P'raps the old chap really is in bed, and it's somebody else in his room?"

This idea was arresting. Leonard considered it. Suddenly he jumped up from his bed and ran out of the room. Napoleon heard him knocking on the next door.

"Mr. Griddle!" called Leonard. There was no reply at first, and he called again. Then a sleepy voice responded, in mumbling tones: "Eh? What's that?"

"Did you call out just now?" asked Leonard, through the door.

"Who's there? Who's that speaking?" Mr. Griddle called back. He now seemed thoroughly awake.

"I thought I heard you calling."

"Calling? No, I didn't call."

"Sorry," said Leonard, apologetically. "I must have been mistaken."

He returned to his room, closing the door softly after him. The tall, angular figure of Napoleon Truelove was vaguely outlined against the bay window.

"Come over here," whispered Leonard, and, taking Napoleon by the arm, led him to another smaller window to the left of the bay, and farther away from Mr. Griddle's room.

"What happened?" asked Napoleon. "We are havin' a lovely time!"

"The old fellow answered me from his bed."

"That'd be on the farther wall," murmured Napoleon. "At least, that's where the bed was when I slept in it."

"The voice was from the farther wall. So our question is—was Griddle there all the time, or did he slip over quickly while I slipped out? Did you hear anything, Truelove?"

"The mouse did seem just a little busy. Look here, I say, couldn't we have the dear little light up? You know, I'd positively adore a few seconds of jolly old illumination!"

"Not just yet, old chap. Tell me, is there a light-house out there?"

"Light-house? You do jerk one's mind about!"

"Or a light-ship?"

This picture, just received, was taken of the mighty Hitler by a member of his family before he attained the age of one year, but still traces of the man as he is today may be seen. Adolf Hitler was born in April 1883 and his father was a Customs official at Braunau, on the Austro-Bavarian frontier.

"No."

"Then—look out of the window—quick! How do you account for that?"

Napoleon looked out of the window, and his heart began to misbehave itself again. A little yellow gleam glowed through the blackness. The next moment, it was gone.

"Whew!" muttered Napoleon. "That's the fourth time I've seen that light," remarked Leonard. "I've been watching. That's why I've been sitting in the dark."

"Ah," said Napoleon, and grew very thoughtful. "And you thought it might be a light-ship?"

"One considers all possibilities," "Oh, yes. By all means. And as it isn't a light-ship, you think it comes from our blessed old wreck?"

"That's fairly obvious."

"The blessed old wreck you and I propose to row out to."

"Yes."

"Ah," said Napoleon again, and grew even more thoughtful. "You know, I'm going to tell you something, and I'd like you to make a note of it, to stick in my obituary."

He went on, after a pause. "I'm a damned good sport."

"I agree to that," replied Leonard, and Napoleon found his hand gripped in the darkness.

"But I'll think no less of you, if you want to back out now."

"Liar!" grunted Napoleon. "And, look here, the next time you stick your jolly old paw out like that, toot your hooter or something. Thanks for the intention, and all that, but you made me jump. Back out? Well, a-pose I did back out? What'd you do?"

"I'd have to make the trip alone."

"Oh. You'd still make the trip?"

"Of course."

"Why?"

"Don't you know?"

"P'raps I do—but I love conversation."

"I'll tell you why," said Leonard, smiling. "That is, one reason why. You rather like Miss Haines, don't you?"

"Shut up," returned Napoleon. "I adore her."

"Well, suppose she were in danger—"

"Good Lord! She's not, is she?"

"No. But suppose she were? Or suppose her father were in danger, or there were any service you could do her—?"

"I'd dive off the moon into an ink-pot," interposed Napoleon, solemnly; and added, after a short silence, during which the little yellow light blinked a fifth time through the darkness, "I say, you rather like Miss Fyne, don't you?"

"Immensely," admitted Leonard.

"Go on! Why don't you say you adore her? I do. That is—in a different way, you know. But look here, I say. What's your other reason? You said she was only one. Wipe her out, and would you still go across a nasty big sea in a nasty little boat on a black, black night—oh, my God, Napoleon, stop it!"

"I would," said Leonard.

"In that case, you priceless dolt, you leave me no alternative," pronounced Napoleon. "You want me. Goodness knows why. You shall have me. And to-morrow I'll be dead or five bob up."

"Make it half-a-crown each, and I'll see you don't die," responded Leonard, and, moving to the door, switched on the light.

"Lord, he does do things in a hurry," grumbled Napoleon Truelove, blinking. "Where are my dark glasses?"

Leonard turned, and regarded his companion with a frown.

"Sorry, old man," murmured Napoleon, "but I was born with it."

"Your face is all right, Truelove," said Leonard, "but it's your suit I object to. Could you slip into one of mine?"

"I'll slip into a Chinese kimono, if it'll give you any pleasure, darling," answered Napoleon, "but what's wrong with my own tailor? He charged me eleven guineas."

"Your suit's too light," explained Leonard, (Continued on Page 11.)

The World's first aerial battleship and the largest flying boat in the Royal Air Force was recently launched at Brough, Yorkshire. The flying boat weighs 17 tons. It has a width of 95 feet and a length of 70 feet. The new machine as it was brought out for the first time is pictured above. (Planet News).

In the presence of Mr. Ramsay MacDonald, the British Premier, and the six survivors of the disaster, a memorial was unveiled to the victims of the R 101 airship tragedy, and on the right a general view of the ceremony. (Planet News).

This picture shows the fighting cockpit of the giant plane which is equipped with an automatic quick firing gun which fires 1 1/2 lb. shells and is the only plane so fitted. (Planet News).

NOTES SUPPLIED BY THE THEATRES

Elissa Landi was one of the two leading roles in Cecil De Mille's spectacular romance of pagan Rome, "The Sign of the Cross," which is now showing at the Queen's Theatre. Miss Landi, borrowed by Paramount from the Fox studios, to whom she is under contract, appears with Frederic March, Claudette Colbert and Charles Laughton.

Miss Landi was born in Venice, Italy, the daughter of Countess Zonard-Landi of Austria. She was educated by private tutors in England and later joined repertory company at Oxford to gather material for a book. Her success on the stage however, brought her offers from continental film producers, who featured her in eight pictures.

In 1930 Rouben Mamoulian, Paramount director, who at that time was directing plays for Al Woods in New York, brought her to America, and starred her in the stage version of "A Farewell to Arms."

Her performance in this resulted in her Fox contract. During the last two years she has appeared in nine pictures, among them being "Body and Soul," "The Yellow Ticket" and "A Passport to Hell."

In addition to her acting, Miss Landi is a writer of some distinction. She has published three novels, two in England and one in America.

In "The Sign of the Cross" she plays the role of the Christian maiden who teaches Marcus Superbus, young Roman aristocrat, the secret of her kind of love.

"I Loved You Wednesday"

Elissa Landi says she has solved the problems of dressing for informal evenings and the result is not only practical but attractive in the extreme.

Miss Landi wears a skirt made of glossy black satin cut very high and held in places by narrow shoulder straps forming deep V both in front and back. The hem-line of the skirt flares out in a soft rippling fullness that takes away any tailored look.

With this garment as a foundation Elissa Landi varies the blouse of her costume according to the occasion. For informal dinner she wears a shell pick satin blouse, with ruffles for sleeves.

For luncheon a blouse of the new twine shade in crepe de chine makes a perfect combination with the slip, and Miss Landi wears a twine material hat and a black coat to complete the costume.

"The uses to which such a costume slip may be put are endless," says Elissa Landi "and it's fun doing it."

In "I Loved You Wednesday," in which she plays opposite Warner Baxter, now at the King's Theatre, she displays a number of novel fashions in apparel.

"Fra Diavolo"

For the first time in six years Laurel and Hardy discard their shabby clothes to don the habiliments of a couple of robbing vagabonds in their latest venture "Fra Diavolo," which comes next Friday to the Queen's Theatre. As embryonic bandits, bold outwardly but diffident when confronting their victims, they are said to have created two of the funniest characterizations of their successful career as a comedy team.

The picture is based on the celebrated Aubrey comic opera and presents a novelty in being the first of the Laurel and Hardy comedies to have a musical touch. To properly interpret the musical phases of the production, LeRoy Shield, well-known musical director, was secured through the courtesy of the National Broadcasting Company of Chicago, and Dennis King, star of "Rose Marie" and "The Vagabond King," was induced to play a featured role.

Also prominent in the cast of "Fra Diavolo" are Thelma Todd, of the noted Pitts-Todd comedy shorts, James Finlayson, Lucille Brown and Henry Armetta. In the course of their vagabondia Stanlio and Olivero, the popular comedy stars are enlisted in this picture, encounter many perennances and many difficulties. Disturbing moments are theirs when they meet a notorious bandit chief, Diavolo (Dennis King), and are forced to accompany him on a thieving mission to a roadside inn.

It is here that they meet Lady Pamela and Lord Roring, portrayed by Miss Todd and Finlayson respectively. Here, too, they confront the innkeeper, Henry Armetta, his daughter and her lover. While all these characters become involved in the machinations of Diavolo, the comedians start a flirtation with a couple of milkmaids.

This, in brief, is the scope of the colourful and picturesque setting. The picture is enhanced with touches of song by King and vocal choruses by a large group of trained singers.

"Bandage"

Eleven girls have found the door of screen opportunity opened to them as a result of being cast for roles in "Bandage," coming on Thursday to the King's Theatre.

To some the chance means the launching of a comeback effort. To others it means the first real "break" in pictures, and to one it is the realization of what seemed a fantastic dream.

Yolanda Pattin for example, was a waitress in the Fox studio cafe. She served the stars and directors and wondered what it would be like to be a picture player. One day Director Alfred Santell told her to put aside her tray and report to him on the "Bandage" set. She was just the type needed for a role in the film featuring Dorothy Jordan, Alexander Kirkland and Morie Tottenham.

Elisa Cort, up to a few months ago, officiated as receptionist at the administration building. Before she took that job she played screen leads, westerns with Warren Kerrigan, westerns with Warren Kerrigan, westerns with Warren Kerrigan. The new opening under her old director may mean a comeback in the character acting field.

"THERE WILL BE NO NEW WAR"

he thought, who believed in humanity could doubt that "sane" international institutions would in the end prevail. I wondered whether any European development had caused him to change his mind.

"Of course not!" He was emphatic, almost indignant. "What is the League of Nations? A place for making speeches? It is a place where men of all countries come to know each other. They meet—and they cannot always talk about the weather. Here is a paradox for you. May not the War have been the beginning of a European Confederation? Just think what it meant. For the first time in human history two halves of the world were aligned against each other. Out of co-operation for war sprang the idea of co-operation for peace. But that, too, is a matter of time—and patience." He smiled. "Politics mean patience."

Later we drove to a hill upon which the jagged ruins of a castle, once a defence against Turkish forays, jutted like white teeth against an almost African sky. The smoke of a wood fire drifted straight up. Not a tree-top swayed. Not a leaf stirred.

"Time and patience..." "Do you hear the stillness?" asked President Masaryk. "We may take it as a symbol of the general peacefulness to come. No, I don't fear a new war. There will be none."

ing under her old director may mean a comeback in the character acting field. Isabel Jewell was considering returning to New York when the part of "Bandage" was offered her.

REFUSING TO FIGHT

When the air is lively with war talk, the conscientious objector controversy also emerges into the front rank of discussion. The idea of refusing to fight has been making progress in many countries. In Britain young men of Oxford passed resolutions declaring their intention of refusing to take up arms to defend King and country; and the subsequent correspondence in the newspapers sufficiently indicated the prevalence of the view that war might be rendered impossible if men refused to serve. In France a number of cases have been dealt with by the courts; and large bodies of those who are most closely associated with the education of the young have advocated individual refusal to participate in the defence of the nation. It is obvious that a distinction is not always drawn between the making of war and the resistance to an attack. If men everywhere were resolved on peace they could make warfare impossible. But a question arises whether it is desirable or even possible, for a relatively small number of persons in a limited number of countries to defy the general opinion that it is a duty to resist invasion. Logically this conception of conscientious objection must lead to the complete and immediate surrender of the most enlightened and pacific countries to forces which are reactionary and belligerent. Certainly no more difficult problem could be presented to the individual. It may be that he is not in accord with the policy of his nation. It may be that he genuinely believes in a higher duty than that of obeying the duly accredited authorities. Yet the distinction between the bad citizen who shrinks his civic responsibilities and the good citizen who is moved only by the dictates of a noble humanity is exceedingly hard to draw. In present conditions, while war is to be abhorred, it is scarcely feasible to permit the individual to decide whether his country is in danger, whether his country should lay down its arms before a conquering army. Just as disarmament can be effected only by international accords, and not by the initiative, which may prove to be imprudent, of a particular nation, so the establishment of peace is not a matter of particular judgment, but must be national and indeed international in its operation. More than ever must all men of good will work to fortify the institutions of peace. They must within their own countries and outside of them, band themselves together to declare that they will take no step which will lead to war, and will take many steps which will lead to peace. It is often asked whether those who loudly intimate their resolve to stand aside from the defence of their country, though it be unjustly attacked, would in

NOTES OF THE DAY

EDUCATING THE WORLD

It is exactly a hundred years ago since the British Government first made grants towards the education of its citizens. The grants were meagre enough—only £20,000—and these were limited to financial assistance, to voluntary societies for the erection of new school buildings. Yet this step was a momentous one in the history of the world. It was the first recognition, however inadequate, by a Great Power of the right of its humblest citizens to receive the benefits of education. Other States followed the lead of Great Britain, until to-day not only does every civilised State demand that all its citizens shall receive at least a minimum of education, but grants larger than that made by the British Government a hundred years ago are to-day made by her towards the education of native tribes in Central Africa who are now citizens of the British Empire but whose very existence was unknown at the time when our centenarians first saw the light of day.

INTERNATIONAL CONCERN

Education has now become not only a matter of first class national importance, but one of international concern as well. Well did the late Viscount Grey declare that the world must either learn or perish! The desperate need of the moment is to train citizens in every country to understand the nature of the new and unified world into which they have been born. All attempts to treat the world as if it were still made up of isolated units simply land us into the mess and confusion into which the world is plunged to-day. The International Committee on Intellectual Co-operation of the League of Nations, which is composed of some of the greatest intellects in the world, has a special committee which is assisting educationalists throughout the world to carry out this task. There is no more urgent one.

WHEN TRADES UNIONS UNITE

History has had some lessons to teach the members of the great trades unions in Britain, and experience has taught them to recognise certain danger signals warning them to look carefully before they act. Such a danger signal scores of thousands of railwaymen see in the proposal for amalgamation of the National Union of Railwaymen with the Transport and General Workers. It might seem obvious that these two powerful organisations should unite. Railway companies employ large numbers of drivers of road vehicles. Again, the same underground in the London area runs electric railways, trams and omnibuses. A similar situation exists for canal and dock workers. There is obviously a strong case for the trade unionist point of view of bringing all these men into a single combination. But certain practical difficulties are immediate, and certain dangers which, as has been proved in the past, have threatened unions, industries and even the safety of the nation.

DEEP PROBLEMS

But the railwaymen cannot forget that in 1914 an ambitious alliance was formed known as the "Triple Alliance," between the three key unions of Great Britain—the railwaymen, the transport workers and the coal miners—and that in 1921 that alliance was put to the test and, happily for the country, broke down under it. That was five years before the famous general strike. The incident showed that such amalgamations of interests, which were not identical, might precipitate conflicts national in their scope. There are many possibilities of grave danger under such a combination as is now proposed. The members scent the possibility of a vast conflict involving their union and the whole country for some dispute not their own. That is why their recent delegate conference refused to take a decision which would commit them too far, and has contented itself with appointing a committee to "consider" the circumstances which have produced the difficulties of organisation within the industry.

fact take up an individual position. Probably most of them would not; probably most of them would rally to their country were it the victim of aggression. But in the meantime, they can only encourage bellicosity among those who may be awaiting a propitious moment for attack. The problem is a social problem—rather than an individual problem. It is one whose solution can only be found by co-operative action of a constructive character. It is not in the disintegration of the nation, but in the integration of mankind, that the remedy for war can be discovered.

"THERE WILL BE NO NEW WAR"

PRESIDENT MASARYK'S FAITH IN

By A. E. AUSTIN

"DEMOCRACY," SAID PRESIDENT MASARYK, "has not withered. It is a growing plant." President Masaryk, eighty-three, philosopher, professor, creator of Czechoslovakia, sat in his garden at Topolcany, three hundred miles east of Prague. On his right the Slovakian forests began, climbing up to the Carpathian spurs on the Polish frontier. On his left the vineyard slopes dwindled away to the Hungarian plain. At his back rose a white, sun-washed wing of Topolcany, Habsburg summer palace—once, "You have some questions for me?"

I had. For fifteen years President Masaryk has ruled—three times elected—keeping Czechoslovakia out of the newspapers. Fifteen years since the Armistice, during which Europe has known the Fascist revolution, the rise of Plutonski, Austria's and Hungary's financial troubles, Roumania's dynastic affairs, Stalin's elimination of his political rivals, the growth of Nazism in Germany.

Of Czechoslovakia, the newest State, the westernmost Slav colony, lapped by Masaryk from the old Habsburg Empire, we have heard next to nothing. A share in the world's economic distress, of course, but of Fascist or Socialist revolution, violent changes of government, not a whisper. Could it be that there, at the very core of Europe, was one exception to that general collapse of democracy so positively proclaimed by Signor Mussolini in his Morning Post articles? Or was the germ of democratic decay to be found in Czechoslovakia also? In Prague I had heard hints—Nazi frontier incidents, a Nazi party among Czechoslovakia's three million Germans, fear of the revival of the old "drank nach Osten" spirit in the new Germany, vague talk of a Slav alliance against pan-Tautonism, a prickly diplomatic neighbourhood with Hungary, bereft of her Slovakian province. I fumbled for clear expression of that general thought. President Masaryk gave me one of his quick, infrequent glances that are like the sparkle of mica in granite. "People who say that democracy has failed are not right," he said. Consider the world—the United States, Great Britain, the British Dominions, France, Holland, Belgium, Switzerland, Norway, Sweden, Denmark, Czechoslovakia, all democracies or constitutional monarchies. And they are not, static. Each is developing, adapting its governmental institutions. "Democracy is developing. Why be impatient? Why assume, because a dictatorship has been established here and there, that democracy has failed? Democracy is not incompatible with dictatorship, under certain conditions. During the War, for instance, the Governments of democratic countries became almost dictatorships. That did not destroy their democratic institutions."

"But democracy must be guided by experts, by those who know. In Czechoslovakia the constitution gives the President power to appoint Ministers. It does not say that he must choose them from among elected members of Parliament. I assumed that I had power to appoint the Ministers most fitted for their task, whether they sit in Parliament or not. If, for instance, I could not find anyone with sufficient knowledge of finance in Parliament I might look elsewhere for a Finance Minister. And I can dismiss a Minister whom I do not think suitable."

The thought occurred to me that this government by experts, by those with knowledge of the art of government, rather than by the counting of heads, was exactly the argument of Signor Mussolini. But before I had time to put it into words President Masaryk had caught me up.

"The ballot-box, which Signor Mussolini despises, may be a most valuable guide to those who govern. The majority of our members of Parliament may not be fit to govern, but they represent different parts of the country, with different problems and different needs. What they say is noted, and their different representations are balanced in the shaping of domestic policy. Democracy, in fact, is publicity. As important as publicity by speeches in Parliament is publicity by the Press. How many journalists are there in Europe?"

I could not answer. The President wagged a monitory finger at me. "Consider what a responsibility is theirs; the Press is also Democracy—why speak only of Parliaments?"

Impatience with the slow working of democratic institutions was, I remarked, returning to his earlier theme, perhaps not altogether surprising when one thought of the mental and moral distress caused by unemployment. He countered with a question—

"What undemocratic Governments have really solved their unemployment problems? Because the financiers and economists cannot unravel the world's financial and economic muddle—that is not the fault of democracy."

He reverted to the ballot-box: "International affairs, our relations with our neighbours—how we should conduct ourselves towards Germany or Hungary—they cannot be settled by the ballot-box, they must be left to those who govern."

The new pan-Germanism is a revival of a pre-War ideal. Austria and Switzerland are independent States. They do more for the German nation—as independent States than they could if they were a part of Germany. Then there are German minorities in Poland, in Czechoslovakia, and elsewhere. Each minority has its own history; there can be no general rule for all of them. Doubtless when a newly-liberated people find themselves in the majority over those who once ruled, difficulties arise. But time will solve them. The problem of Minorities is, I know, very important—but not only for Democracies, for Monarchies also."

"Two months behind on the rent and you turn away pupils because they haven't enough talent."

The Very Idea!

PARTY PARTICULARS

By Edward Kelly, Host.

IN view of the imminence of the festivities invariably associated (what big words you have, grandmother!) with this time of the year, we think it's about time we started to give hints on how to blow up balloons and other preparations for Halowe'en.

Two many people leave their preparations till the last minute and are caught in the act of telling the "boy" how to form fours and leap obstacles.

The careful party hostess will see that the sandwiches are cut at least a week beforehand. Oyster patties and other Hors d'oeuvres, as they say in France, may be left till later.

The thing, of course, is to make the party go with a swing. Indoor games should play a big part.

Fuss in the Corner is a very nice game, especially when you have thirty six guests and only four corners. Pop Goes the Wensel is jolly if you can get hold of a suitable wensel, and it is so wensely played. Not like Kiss in the Ring, which needs a certain amount of tact, lipstick and stamina.

The hostess should see that, right from the start, everyone is made to feel at home. With married men a good slap in the face as they enter the room will suffice.

Women should be spoken to in friendly, tactful way, such as "My, you do look haggard!" and little intimate touches like that.

The hardened host will find that a game of "Coming, Ready Or Not" is essential at various stages of the party.

The host invariably goes "IT". He counts a hundred while the guests scatter and hide. "IT" then cries in a loud voice "Coming—ready or Not!"

He then lights a cigarette, puts his feet up on the back of another chair, pours himself a rum, and says, "Well, thank heavens for a bit of peace and quietness."

After about half an hour the hidden guests will give themselves up voluntarily.

The game of "Murders" is still quite fashionable in some circles. You draw lots to see who is going to be the murderer, and nobody knows who is it. Then you put the lights out, and when the lights go on again you've got to find out who did it.

If you have your girl friend sitting next to you, it's a splendid opportunity to grasp her hand. It makes the game much more interesting if someone is actually murdered. People who insist on singing "She Was Only Somebody's Daughter" or "Beneath Thy Window" are good subjects and would never be missed. We have got rid of a lot of people this way.

The finish of a party is no less important than the start. The hostess will usually find herself with about twelve people who have missed the last ferry across the harbour, or who are not in a fit condition to travel.

The usual procedure is for the hostess to go to her husband and say in a hoarse, hysterical voice, "What the devil are we going to do with these confounded people?"

The husband answers, "Wassermarrer?" The wife then replies, "Bah!" She then returns to her guests and says:

"You really must stay with us to-night. You couldn't possibly go home now. Oh, no! No trouble at all! I'll soon fix you up."

Then, having got them all bedded down, she says to her husband, "Come on."

Then they leave the house, first setting fire to it in several places. This saves all the yachting up.

PARDON US

Speaking of parties reminds us of our last trip home on a P. & O. liner. We don't mind admitting, for the sake of putting this one over, that we're not much of a sailor.

Our steward approached us confidently with a bottle in his hand when we told him about our qualms. "Here, take this," he said, "it'll fix you, good'n proper."

We took it, and next morning never felt better. We searched for our steward with gratitude in our eyes, and our hand in our pocket.

"Where's our steward?" we asked another of the ilk. "No, Joe?" he enquired. "Why 's down in his bunk, fair out to it 'o's senesick!"

THE NAVY'S AIR ARM

EXERCISES BY THE "EAGLE"

NAVY DAY PRELIMINARY

Fighting planes whirling overhead, now in formation, now swooping to send a hail of machine gun bullets at a target which their parent ship was towing behind her; bombers dropping their deadly missiles from an altitude of 1,500 feet; destroyers plunging madly through a rough sea—the preliminary event in the programme for Navy Day in Hongkong was in progress off Waglan.

Residents of the Colony who were guests of the Senior Service on Saturday morning on three destroyers of the 8th Flotilla to witness some of the tactics which would be employed by fighting planes at sea in the time of war, had a thrill which they will long remember.

Nineteen planes with their parent ship, H.M. Aircraft Carrier Eagle took part in the manoeuvres, but unfortunately on account of the high wind and occasional showers part of the programme had to be cancelled.

Everything was provided for the comfort of the guests, even to the provision of blankets and sou'westers for those who left the cover of the awnings and braved the elements to get a better view of the proceedings.

At 8 o'clock the start was made from H.M. Dockyard. His Excellency the Governor, Sir William Peel, and Lady Peel, accompanied by a number of senior officers of His Majesty's Forces and other official guests boarded H.M.S. Kestrel, the Flotilla Leader, as she lay alongside the West Wall East. Everything set, she pulled out and made for Lyemun. Ten minutes later she was followed by H.M.S. Wishart and H.M.S. Witch carrying other guests. In Junk Bay they picked up with H.M.S. Eagle which had been lying at anchor, and when the official guests had been transferred from the Kestrel to the carrier the procession started seaward, the Wishart and Witch leading with the Eagle coming up astern with the Kestrel as escort.

Just after the ships moved off they met the heavy swell and the destroyers started plunging and tossing. Several people on board who had gone below for coffee and breakfast, hurriedly made for the deck where they crowded every vantage point in readiness for the manoeuvres to commence. Some of the more venturesome took up positions on the forecastle gun deck, while others made the bridge their grandstand.

Zero hour was set at 0930 and at that hour the display commenced abreast the Ninopins. The destroyers slowed down as the Eagle came up with the wind. Despite the monsoonal weather the nine Hawker Ospreys took off the spacious deck without mishap to roar upwards and southwards in three flights. They circled the destroyers in flight formation and then, one by one, swooped seaward. Their objective was a small target which the Eagle towed about 100 yards astern and as the planes passed just over the target the rattle of their machine guns was just audible. They passed on and again took up formation.

The first indication of the presence of the bombers was a message from the Eagle telling destroyers to "Keep clear of the bombs." Away in the distance, and coming from the direction of Kai Tak could be seen a squadron of ten Fairey III-F bombing machines. Coming overhead they circled and when about 1,500 feet up released their bombs. The deadliness of their aim was indicated by the clouds of smoke which rose as the bombs hit the water close to the trailing target. Then, taking up squadron formation, they passed on out of sight, to return a few minutes later from the north and conclude their performance with a mimic torpedo attack with the Eagle as their objective.

The fighting planes then came into action again and dived and swooped in a display of aerobatics. The adverse elements made it impossible to carry out the original programme, but they concluded with a spectacular manoeuvre in which three planes gave the formation known as the "Princes of Wales Feathers."

This brought the display to a close and the Eagle, accompanied by the three destroyers turned back towards Hongkong. Passing one of the islands on route the Eagle's anti-aircraft guns were demonstrated. At the entrance to Lyemun Pass the Wishart and Witch left the Eagle, turned eastwards and made a detour back to harbour through East Lamma Channel and Sulphur Channel, landing their passengers shortly after noon at Murray Pier.

BRILLIANT DISPLAY OF DANCING

Saturday's Gala At The Peninsula Hotel

A brilliant farwell performance by Don and Sally and the best exhibition of ballroom dancing given by J. A. Andrew and Miss Ursula Preston since their arrival in Hongkong were features which contributed to an especially enjoyable and successful gala night at the Peninsula Hotel on Saturday.

Don and Sally first gave their tango which had previously delighted hotel patrons, but their second number was the piece de resistance, and the large crowd simply clamoured for more. In this dance Don and Sally accomplished some remarkably fine movements with a finale which brought the house down.

Equally entertaining were Andrew and his partner. Their first offering was a quick-step for which they were given a very generous reception.

Their second appearance, billed as a novelty number, turned out to be a solo tap dance by Miss Preston, which proved very conclusively that her prowess in versatility is not confined to the ballroom dances.

Finally she and her partner demonstrated a waltz. This is by far their best number, and so delighted were the onlookers, that an encore was insisted upon, and the dancers performed the rumba, the English version of which offers a very dignified and graceful study in movement.—S.A.G.

ARMY MANOEUVRES OVER

JAPANESE SHAM FIGHT
ENDS IN TRUCE

Fukui, Oct. 26. The third and last day of the autumn grand manoeuvres of the Japanese Army began with terrific "fighting" along the Kudzurui river at dawn to-day. Leaving the general headquarters in the Fukui Prefectural Government building at 5.45 o'clock a.m., Emperor Hirohito supervised the manoeuvres personally on his favourite horse, Shirayuki, which means "White Snow."

The wind was bitterly cold. Both "South" and "North" armies were seen crossing the river in efforts to deliver the final blow. A truce was announced at eight o'clock and the Emperor returned to headquarters at 8.20.

The grand review will take place to-morrow morning under the command of Lieut. Gen. Yoshikata Aramaki, commander of the 9th Division.

JAPANESE MOVE THAT FAILED

Abortive Effort With Mongolian Princes

Peking, Oct. 26. Mr. Wu Hao-lin, Director of the Nanjing Office for the various Mongolian Banners and Leagues, who is on a visit here, announced that the Central Government recently adopted a set of seven general principles. These principles called, inter alia, for co-operation between the Mongolian banners and leagues and the Central Government; enforcement of local autonomy under the direction of the Central Government; co-operation between the Mongolian banners and leagues and the various provincial and district authorities; and co-operation between the Mongolian princes and the general population.

Mr. Wu also disclosed that the Japanese attempted to convene a conference of Mongolian princes at Dolorin in September, which, however, turned out a failure, as the princes made only a feeble response to the Japanese invitation.—Kuo Min.

fluent knowledge of the Japanese language, asserted that it had already been decided to adopt the constitutional monarchy system in Manchoukuo "sooner or later."

With Mr. Henry Pu-yi as Emperor, for this reason, he said, his studies in Japan would include the study of the Japanese Imperial House Law.

Dr. Chao is expected to remain in Japan about a year, after which he will return to Manchoukuo to draft the new Constitution, based on the result of his studies in Japan. The very fact of his having come to Tokyo for this purpose would, therefore, seem to indicate that, although the present form of administration in Manchoukuo is likely to undergo drastic revision, the main feature will be a change over to the monarchical system not to incorporation into the Japanese Empire by annexation.

JAPANESE BUDGET DIFFICULTIES

BIG SLASH IN DEMANDS

Tokyo, Oct. 26.

The Accounting Bureau of the Finance Ministry completed its preparatory study of the budget of various Ministries yesterday and the Finance Office will hold its first budget conference to-morrow afternoon at the official residence of the Finance Minister, Mr. K. Takahashi, to make a final decision. The conference is expected to continue at least a week.

Reliable information indicates that the Bureau approved of only ¥330,000,000 out of the ¥1,400,000,000 demanded for "fresh enterprises" for the next fiscal year. This was done in accordance with an agreement that the budget for "fresh enterprises" should be cut to one half of the amount requested in order to establish a sound financial programme. The budgets of the Army and Navy are reported to have been touched very little pending the decision of the Finance Ministry Conference.

The total budget thus approved by the Accounting Bureau calls for expenditures of approximately ¥2,050,000,000, including the running expenses of various Ministries estimated at ¥1,420,000. Supposing this amount to be the final budget, the Government will have to issue public bonds for about ¥1,680,000,000 to cover the deficit. It is considered certain, however, that the final budget for next year will be far larger than this amount due to the addition of items of a political nature by the government. In the end, the budget total is expected to exceed ¥2,800,000,000.

VIENNA SENSATION.

ALLEGED COMPLICITY BY GERMAN PRINCES

Vienna, Oct. 28. A sensational discovery, which is alleged to connect two German Princes with the recent attempt on the life of Dr. Dollfuss, the Austrian Chancellor, was made this afternoon in a raid on the castle of Princes Ranier and Ernst of Sachsen-Coburg-Gotha at Schlading, Styria.

A letter was found from Kurt Dertli, brother of Rudolf Dertli, the would-be assassin of Dr. Dollfuss, begging for financial support, the purpose of which is not yet clear. Kurt Dertli has been arrested.—Reuter.

LESSONS FOR NAZIS.

"The Stormtrooper" Has Interesting Articles.

Prague, Oct. 29. In view of the German insistence upon the non-military status of the Nazi Stormtroops, interest attaches to the contents of "The Stormtrooper," the weekly official organ of the Nazi Stormtroopers, which is sold in book-stalls throughout Germany. The publication contains articles by military men on such subjects as "Technique in World War," "War in South-west Africa," "Secrets of the U-Boat War," the Colonial question, gas warfare and treatises on German and other war fleets.

Also, there are illustrated articles on military technicalities in this publication, and contributions on the so-called "defence sports," which include long distance marching, running and motor cycling.—Reuter.

EDINBURGH DINNER.

CELEBRATION OF ANNIVERSARY IN HONGKONG

On Saturday night, graduates and members of Edinburgh University met, to celebrate the 50th anniversary of the founding of the University. The celebration took the form of a dinner in the Jacobean Room at the Hongkong Hotel, followed by dancing in the ball room. The Vice-Chancellor of Hongkong University, Sir W. W. Hornell, G.C.B., was present as guest of honour. The following were also present:

Dr. R. M. Gibson, Dr. and Mrs. E. W. Kirk, Dr. and Mrs. Li Shu-fan, Mr. and Mrs. S. V. Boxer, Mr. and Mrs. W. Kay, Professor and Mrs. R. K. M. Simpson, Mr. and Mrs. W. J. Carrie, Mr. and Mrs. J. A. Fraser, Mr. and Mrs. W. J. E. Macdonald, Mr. and Mrs. P. E. Barker, Mr. and Mrs. B. Law, Dr. and Mrs. J. B. Ross, Dr. and Mrs. J. E. Dwyer, Dr. and Mrs. J. A. R. Selby, Dr. and Mrs. J. Durran, Dr. and Mrs. R. S. Begbie, Dr. and Mrs. A. J. B. Macle, Dr. J. C. Macgowan, Mr. J. S. MacLaren, Professor L. J. Davis, Dr. T. P. Woo, Mr. R. Hunter, Mr. J. J. Ferguson, Mr. E. R. Bryden and Mr. J. B. Macdonald.

The toast of "Our Alma Mater" was proposed by Professor R. K. M. Simpson, M.C. A telegram of congratulations was sent to Sir Thomas Holland, Principal of the University.

INDUSTRY AID

GOVERNMENT HELP FOR LANCASHIRE

London, Oct. 29.

The Government, through the Bank of England and the Bankers' Industrial Development Company, is reported to be negotiating with important Lancashire cotton mill owners with a view to financing the reorganisation of the whole industry.

The plan, as set forth by the Government, is reported to be one embodying amalgamation of mills, scrapping of redundant plants, modernisation of methods in manufacturing and selling.

According to the News of the World the Government is prepared to use powers of legislation in the form of compulsory measures, to effect the reform.—Reuter.

The Lancashire cotton industry has been passing through critical times, labour troubles and foreign competition, principally from Japan, having gravely affected the once prosperous mills.

Lancashire Delegates Sail For England.

AGREEMENT REACHED.

Bombay, Oct. 28.

The Lancashire cotton delegation sailed for England yesterday after reaching an agreement with the Indian cotton merchants. Sir William Clare Lees, leader of the British delegation is most pleased with the result of the meetings with the Indian and Japanese industrialists.

The agreement with the Indian cotton merchants states that the Indian delegates have agreed that the industry requires a higher level of protection against foreigners than against the United Kingdom. They will not make any fresh proposals in regard to duties applicable to British cotton and piece-goods imports when the time comes for the removal of the surcharges on all imports, imposed in October, 1931.

The duty on British cotton-yards may be five per cent, ad valorem with a specific duty of 1½ annas per pound.

The duties on British artificial silk goods may be 30 per cent, ad valorem or 2½ annas per square yard for 100 per cent, artificial silk fabrics, or 2 annas per square yard on a mixture of cotton and artificial silk fabrics.

The duration of the agreement is limited to December 31, 1935.

Equal Advantages.

The agreement also provides that, as regards Empire and other overseas markets, any advantages arranged for British piece goods and yarns should be extended to Indian goods and that India should participate in any United Kingdom quota in markets, any advantages arranged for British piece goods and yarns should be extended to Indian goods and that India should participate in any United Kingdom quota in markets where she has no independent quota.

The Indian representatives emphasised the necessity of further efforts in the United Kingdom to promote the use of Indian raw cotton.—Reuter.

KINGSHIP OF CHRIST.

IMPORTANT CATHOLIC FEAST CELEBRATED

One of the most important feasts in the Roman Catholic Calendar—that of the Kingship of Christ—was celebrated in the Colony yesterday with the holding of special services and an imposing procession at the Cathedral of the Immaculate Conception.

A series of Masses were said in the morning, and at the chief of these—a Pontifical Mass—the officiating priest (Bishop Valtorta) had the assistance of Fr. Novat, Procurator of the Spanish Mission, and four other members of the local Catholic clergy. The musical part of the service was supplemented by a Choir.

Hundreds of the faithful took part in the procession held within the compound of the Cathedral in the afternoon. The function, which is associated with the Blessed Sacrament, drew one of the strongest musters of the Confraternity during the year, and included other secular orders from the different parishes.

Boy Scouts, children from the Catholic schools, and members of the clergy also walked in the procession, of which the most striking detail was the Canon of the Mass, Government under which the Bishop was escorted by a band of honour furnished by the Portuguese Company of the Hongkong Volunteer Defence Corps.

A band from the St. Louis Industrial School brought up the rear, followed by many hundreds of the faithful.

ANOTHER LORRY CRASHES.

T O KILLED AND OTHERS
SERIOUSLY INJURED.

A motor lorry's wild career down the Shaokwan Hill on Saturday afternoon culminated in the death of a coolie passenger, and serious injuries to three others, one of whom subsequently died in hospital.

With a load of molasses mash, and several coolies as passengers, the lorry was on its way back to the city from Stanley, and the mishap occurred, it is thought, as the result of the driver losing control. After rolling down the incline for some distance, the vehicle crashed into an embankment and ricocheted slantwise into a nullah alongside, where it became firmly lodged.

Warned by the driver's frantic efforts, a number of the passengers jumped off, and others were thrown out when the vehicle struck the embankment.

Two, Chan Yim and Wong Kau, were fatally hurt, the former being killed instantly and the latter succumbing later at the Government Civil Hospital.

The driver, Wong Wah, escaped almost scatheless, but two other passengers, somewhat seriously injured, were taken to the hospital.

The lorry is owned by the Yau Hing Yee firm of coal-merchants, of 376, Lockhart Road.

The mishap occurred only some 24 hours after another lorry had plunged over the roadside between Stanley and Aberdeen, this also resulting in two men, building contractor's workmen, being killed, and three others injured.

SPECIAL REPORTS OF THE WEEK-END FOOTBALL

HONGKONG'S "SHOCK" ATTACK FAILS

MORE LESSONS LEARNT FROM THE INTERPORT CRICKET TRIAL

(By "Cover Point")

Comparatively speaking, the third Cricket Interport Trial on Saturday was an even worse failure than its predecessors. Certainly it revealed the utter impotence of the Hongkong shock attack on a disadvantageous wicket.

The trial also revealed that A. W. Hayward's eleven, which on paper looked like the probable Interport team, lacked bowlers. Although opposed to a team mediocre in batting strength, their bowlers still failed to make an impression even with the lighting conditions in their favour.

At the moment there is only one bowler really capable of adapting himself to a wet wicket, and that is A. R. Minu. But even he did not seem to be bowling very well on Saturday. T. M. L. Redmond was the only member of the attack to make an impression, but it was apparent that under severe punishment he was inclined to lose his head and become erratic. The ball with which he beat E. F. Fincher was, however, a beauty, coming very fast from the pitch and knocking the off stump. Minu, however, rather spoilt his bowling analysis by hitting him to all corners of the field, including a straight hit for six which landed on the screen. Redmond also claimed P. V. Williams' wicket, but I think the batsman contributed more to his downfall than the bowler. I have never seen Williams make such a sorry show. He tried to hook every ball, and in attempting to dispatch a straight one from Redmond to the leg, missed and was out for obstruction.

THE SHOCK ATTACK.

A difficult problem will confront the selectors with regard to Lt. Garthwaite, Lt. Hamilton, G. C. Burnett, F. D. Pereira and F. Goodwin. It appears obvious that Hongkong's bowling attack will have to be entrusted to any two or three of these players.

Both Garthwaite and Hamilton have been utter failures in the trials. Garthwaite although he captured three wickets on Saturday was far from impressive, while his batting was very patchy. He got some nice shots to the leg, but showed a decided weakness on the off. If it comes to choosing between these two players I think Garthwaite should be given the preference.

Hamilton is inclined to be too reckless as a batsman, and as a bowler far too erratic. Burnett seemed to be off-colour, and was not bowling as usual. He was, however, unfortunate in not having Williams caught when the batsman skied a ball to the leg, and Rodrigues failed to take a running catch.

Goodwin and Pereira will provide a successful shock attack given a very hard wicket, but the least said about them on a wet wicket the better.

DIFFICULT CONDITIONS.

In all fairness to the bowlers, I must say that Saturday's conditions were sufficient to dampen the enthusiasm of any of them. Furthermore, in spite of the fact that the wicket was all in their favour, the batsmen, except for Minu, Tam Pearce, S. V. Gittins and G. C. Burnett, showed but little enterprise, and the cricket was, on the whole, dull.

I think the best the selectors can do is to leave the choice of bowlers until the morning of the match, and then choose according to the weather conditions prevailing.

As for the probable match on Saturday between the Interport eleven and the Rest, perhaps the wisest course would be to have a trial pitting the probable Interport bowlers against the batsmen. It would be interesting to see how Hongkong's Interport batsmen fare against the selected bowlers.

St. Joseph's Lose Their 100 Per Cent Record

AFTER a month of football which had reached an unusually high standard, it was not altogether surprising during the week-end to find a reaction set in, and the football to revert to that type so common last season.

TWO games suffered very badly in this respect—Club v Police and South China v St. Joseph's,—whilst Kowloon supporters could find very little to console them in the fact that their team deserved to win against the Athletic, but didn't.

SPECIAL descriptive reports of the leading week-end matches will be found below.

TOO TIRED TO PLAY

DISPIRITED GAME YESTERDAY

S. CHINA BEAT THE SAINTS

(By "Veritas")

South China and St. Joseph's took such a long time to find their feet in their important league encounter at Caroline Hill yesterday, that by the time it was accomplished, they did not know what to do with them.

As a display of tired, insipid football this game, won by South China by two clear goals, would be difficult to surpass. It was certainly not complimentary to either the champions or their potential challengers.

No wonder the spectators became puzzled about St. Joseph's 100 per cent. record and shook a negative head over South China's championship claim.

The only players who appeared capable of lifting a foot faster than a small taking things easy were Leonard and A. Gosano, and this was more a case of necessity than of choice.

Pretty-Pretty Stuff

Fundamentally both teams made the big mistake of overdoing the "pretty-pretty" stuff. It was just ordinary playing about football and lacked the redeeming quality of being progressive.

Both teams fielded reserves. South China were without Leung In-chun in the half back line, and Ip Pak-wa in the attack, whilst St. Joseph's were minus the services of Gomes and Lawrence.

The Chinese surmounted their difficulties by bringing in Tong Kwan, sending Wong Moo-shun to centre-half, and bringing in Leung Tai-wing and Ng Po-kui among the forwards.

St. Joseph's attack had to deliver up Dave Leonard to partner A.V. Gosano at back, and Elms and Ward were introduced to the forward line.

South China were immeasurably superior. For fifteen minutes in the first half they shot at goal. Admittedly without much accuracy and from a distance which rarely troubled Marques. But the fact that the ball was constantly in the Saints' half was constantly in the Saints' half was constantly in the Saints' half.

And as is not unusual with this type of game in which one side is right on top in mid-field, it was St. Joseph's who went nearest to scoring. In fact Rochin missed an absolute sitter from a perfect pass by Ward, and the last named himself broke through in clever style shortly afterwards to send Wong Wing at full length to effect one of the most spectacular saves of the afternoon.

But from that stage the South

NO FINISH

WHY KOWLOON LOST

DISAPPOINTING DISPLAY

(By "Wanderer.")

For the second time this season a snap goal in the last minute of the game robbed Kowloon of a well-merited draw.

The Athletic's fast forward line were constantly dangerous in the first half and built up a lead of 3-1 at the interval. For the greater part of the second half, they were penned in their own half of the field and Elliot first reduced the lead with a nice header and then put Kowloon on terms with a dandy shot.

BREAKAWAY GOAL

The equaliser gave added stimulus to the game and although Kowloon swarmed around the Athletic goal-mouth, their concentration upon attack, justified in the circumstances, gave the opening for a shary breakaway by the lively Athletic forward line in the closing minutes which ended in the downfall of Cord's charge. Willis had two opportunities of clearing, but he kicked the ball against an opponent's knees and it rebounded to the scorer.

The Athletic showed Kowloon the way to solve up their opening, their shooting being deadly. With twice as many opportunities the attack of the home side did not look nearly as dangerous.

China goal did not look like falling in a month of Sundays. Lau Mau tightened their grip on the forward line which, with its retrogressive ideas of attack, just played into their hands.

Furthermore Bernali Gosano, who defeated his own ends by his aimless nomadic game, found in Leung Wing-chui a half back who had one too many tricks up his sleeve.

The only bright relief in a drab forward line came from Elms and Ward. The former meeting Lau Mau on his merits and not his reputation, and he had been given better support, South China might have been given cause for anxiety.

Complete Failure

The Saints half back line was a complete failure, and excessive labour was piled on Leonard and Gosano. Leonard played with great determination and made a great covering for Marques. Gosano was not so happy under pressure, and like others before him, found in Yeung Sui-yick a youngster with ideas and the skill to employ them to advantage.

Apart from Leonard's holding up of the left wing, South China were pretty well on top in all departments. Wong Wing had only one difficult shot to save. Lau Mau and Li Tim-sang were as "safe as houses," and the half back line without blamish in their tackling.

Only the fact that they overdid the short passing game robbed the winners of more goals. Perhaps there is some excuse for them. South China had gained the full measure of them opponents after ten minutes and doubtless felt themselves justified in giving expression to their superiority in the way they did.

Luckily for them it did not react on their own heads. For this they have to thank St. Joseph's, who made the mistake of trying to ape them.

Retort Disdainful!

One amusing incident occurred in the last five minutes, when, with St. (Continued on Page 6.)

METHODLESS FOOTBALL

CLUB SCRAPE WIN AGAINST POLICE

FOWLER SAVES THE GAME

(By "Veritas").

Club 3 Police 2

If the standard of football in this match had been as bright as the new jerseys donned by the Police, it would have sent a critical crowd away feeling satisfied and would have made a description of the game a happy task.

Actually it was 'the worst match I have seen this season. Both teams were at fault. Methodless, desultory, with tempers keyed up to an unusually high pitch, they aimlessly kicked their way through 70 minutes. And a section of the crowd sought relief in baiting the referee. No! The Club v Police encounter of 1933 will not go down to posterity as the brightest football match of the year!

Taking all things into consideration the Club had quite a legitimate claim to the two points. They were superior in that negative type of superiority of being the better of two bad teams. Yet until that final whistle they stood just as much chance of losing as of winning.

Shock Tactics

Shock tactics were the order of the day. Planned movements (with a rare exception here and there) were taboo. Funt the ball up the field and run for it. These were the attacks. Kick the ball as hard as possible and trust to luck. This was, in the main, the defence. Both applied equally to the two teams, so that if a stranger to football had been present he would have been excused had he ventured to suggest that there was no science in the game.

It is peculiar how players will go to extremes. The Club have apparently just realised that Howe is a potential goal scorer if given through-the-middle passes. So they put the idea into practice. Unfortunately two things went wrong. Firstly, Howe was off colour and failed to make use of these new and probably unexpected opportunities and secondly the whole thing was overdone.

No matter what position Howe was in no matter if he was covered by the whole of the Police defence, through went that ball, whilst Blackford and Fowler, unmarked in favourable positions, stood by and possibly wondered, as did I, what they had done to deserve such a boycott.

Pre-Determined

The value of all pre-determined attacking movements is in their judicious application, whether such movements be the through pass, the open attack of wing to wing, or close passing between the forwards and halves. (Continued on Page 6.)

MAMAK HOCKEY CLEVER VICTORY FOR POLICE

The Police gained their second victory in the Mamak hockey tournament yesterday afternoon, when they defeated the Kowloon Indians Tennis Club by four goals to nil at King's Park. Leading at the interval by the only goal scored, the Police added three more goals in the second period of the game. C. P. Pennington, Perkins and W. W. Nettledale were the goals for the winners.

The game was played at a fast pace, and was evenly contested throughout. Jeap, in goal, and Gough, at centre-half, played very well, while Hayward, making his debut at right back for the Police team, showed much promise.

Of the K.T.C. forwards, I. Singh and S. Singh were good, while in the defence Naidu played a hard game.

SIX GOALS FOR GERMAN CLUB

Against Corps of Signals

Unable to field a representative team for their Mamak tournament fixture a scratch German Club side of ten men met a weak Royal Corps of Signals eleven in a friendly match on the Marina ground on Saturday and won by 6 goals to 1.

Pracht, the German International, scored all six goals, while Short netted the only goal for the Signals. Diocesan School Loss.

The Diocesan Girls' School hockey team lost by the odd goal in three to the "Y" Ladies in a friendly game on the School ground on Saturday. The "Y" Ladies led by a goal scored by Miss M. Griffiths in the first half. The School team equalised in the second half through Miss M. Smith but Miss O. Dalsiel gave the "Y" victory just before full time.

They must be adopted to suit requirements. It was obvious on Saturday that Howe was a marked man, and it was equally obvious that as a result, the wingers enjoyed greater freedom.

The Police were out to stop Howe from scoring, which was the precise reason why Bickford and Fowler should have been given more of the ball.

Apart from these tactical errors, the Club forwards showed little improvement in their finishing. Howe ruined two glorious chances by not shooting first time and Eric Strange was likewise to blame in the second half. This idea of yanking the ball into the net is quite all right provided you can give your opponent ten yards in 60.

Fowler was the brightest of the forwards. He is both a stickler and a player who can make use of opportunities. Both of his goals were due to this latter virtue, and there was nothing fluky about them.

Lowson's Great Display

Bickford was clever, but he seldom found Strange with him and being made to work on his own made the going rather severe for him.

Strange who is a natural individualist, and should be encouraged to develop this trait on right lines, would do well to forsake the fourth half back game and maintain closer touch with Bickford.

Dominy was thoroughly over-shadowed by Chris Pile, whom I thought was the most artistic player on the field.

Back in the half line we had the Club players proving themselves great spotters, but neglecting the other fundamental duty of attending to their forwards. Misdirected passes were the order of the day. Unfortunately for the Club this seems to be the order for every day, and until improvement is shown here, they will always find goal scoring a difficult matter.

Diamond Hynes made a welcome appearance in the team at the last minute, and with Syd Strange, gave a demonstration of solid defending.

But the Big Man in the defence was Lowson, who, brought in to deputise for Fogwell, gave a splendid display, saving two "certain goals" and making a grand effort to thwart Green from converting a penalty. He was only a fraction of a second too late with his dive across the goal, and although touching the ball, failed to deflect it. Throughout he handled the ball with confidence and made clean clearances. Fogwell has a very sound understudy in Lowson.

No Constructive Ideas

My comments on the Club team might very well be applied to the Police. With them there was lack of concerted action; a team comparatively barren of constructive ideas, and forwards without the ability to push home their advantages so hard won from the middle of the field.

One found relief in the displays of McHardy in goal, Chris Pile, left back, Channing, a centre-half, Shepherd at left half, and Brittain and Green on the left wing.

Pile's skill in holding up the ubiquitous Fowler demanded admiration, and he also saved McHardy from a number of anxious moments.

Channing paid due and proper attention to Howe, and for the Police, with excellent results. Shepherd volleys well on his left flank, but he too failed to give his forwards sufficient support.

The forward line was an oddly assorted combination. Gough was planted out on the right wing in the first half though Heaven knows why. The last time I saw Gough play he was scoring goals for the Artillery from the inside right berth.

Whether his transference to the wing is meant as a subtle compliment to his believed versatility is hard to say, but the results on Saturday were certainly quite the opposite.

Willerton is not such a forceful leader as Johnstone, and frankly the only danger of the Club rearguard came from Brittain and Green, who did play together with some understanding and had a respectable shot in their boots.

How the Goals Came

The Club opened the scoring through Fowler, who neatly slipped in to snap up a ground shot by Howe which was going astray. They held the lead up to the interval, after which the Police were awarded a penalty through Robertson handling, and Green equalised.

London teams carried off the principal honours in Saturday's home football engagements and their success served to give point to the growing weakness of some of last season's Midland and Northern star clubs.

Arsenal went to Birmingham to gain two points at the expense of Aston Villa who have now been beaten twice on their own ground. The main feature of the visitors was their excellent defence.

By virtue of this scarcely hoped for brace of points, the Highbury Club remain second to their local rivals of White Hart Lane whose 2-0 defeat of Middlesbrough was the easiest forecast of the day.

Perhaps the best performance was witnessed at Wolverhampton where a rejuvenated eleven swept the Wednesday off their feet and won by four clear goals.

NO FEET OF CLAY.

In the Second Division the Hammers crept further up the table with the two points culled from their Lincoln visitors Vic Watson who has long been the idol of the Upton Park crowd, distinguished himself by putting three into the net.

Port Vale retained their form in taking a point from Preston North End whilst Bolton, one point behind the leaders, revealed the weaknesses of the Craven Cottage club.

Thanks mainly to Pearce, Charlton beat Torquay by the largest margin of the day, scoring six times without reply, but the greatest praise is due Norwich who went to Exeter and won by the odd goal in seven. There is a bunch of strong clubs at the head of the Southern section and I expect the keenest matches of the season will take place on their grounds before the promotion question is settled again.

Luton failed to spring a surprise at Reading, but Brighton managed to hold Southend to a goalless draw and Newport shared two goals at Cardiff.

AMAZING ROTHERHAM.

Amazing Rotherham netted twice at Rochdale, and there was no reply! I expect this Club to leave the bottom of the table shortly and only hope they will be able to keep it up.

Chesterfield are not sitting pat on the biggest lead of any Division in the League. No they packed dynamite in their boots to welcome New Brighton to the Salter Lane ground and registered four goals—also without an answer.

I don't think Crewe hoped to beat Accrington on their own ground but that's what they did.

In the Scottish League, Rangers have still a match in hand and have now advanced to within four points of Motherwell. It is pretty evident that these two clubs will have to fight it out among themselves as their nearest challengers are points in arrears.

St. Johnstone must have been on top form to get the better of Queen's Park whom I had expected to be fairly invincible on their own ground now.

Almost immediately afterwards, Ernie Strange was fouled in the fatal area and his brother came up to score with a perfect shot.

For a time after this the Police were really dangerous, and when Green scrambled home an equaliser it looked as though the Club were going to be beaten.

But in a fading light they carried the ball down, and Fowler clinched the issue with a clever goal from Bickford's corner.

TOO TIRED TO PLAY

Joseph's two goals down, A. V. Gosano went up forward to try his luck.

Within half a minute Lau Mau was shifted up to inside left, Tam Kong-puk dropping back. It was the retort dispirited!

South China's goals came in the second half, when Pau Ka-ping, after shooting all round the posts, broke through and beat Marques with a hard rising shot which struck the underneath of the bar and rebounded into the net.

He added a second some time later when he dashed through after Young Sit-yick had beaten Gosano, and tapped the ball past the outcoming goal-keeper.

HANDSOME WIN FOR THE M.C.C.

FRONTIER PROVINCES LOSE BY INNINGS.

Peshawar, Oct. 29. The M.C.C. tourists defeated the North West Frontier Provinces by an innings and 135 runs.

The Provinces were completely routed by Nichols when they first went to the wicket, being sent back for 94. Nichols captured 5 for 28.

The M.C.C. replied with 350 for 7 declared, Mitchell scoring 84, Townsend 94, and D. R. Jardine 67.

In their second innings the Provinces were dismissed for 121.

HONGKONG RUGBY SEASON.

The Hongkong Football Club did not maintain the form of the previous week when vanquishing the Navy, as they had to bow to defeat in the first friendly fixture of the season against the Army at Sookanpo on Saturday, by a score of 6 points (2 tries) to 3 points (1 try).

Neither side was at full strength. Whitlam and Garrod being absent from the Club XV. Hutchison and Stillard filling the vacant positions. The Army were without Lieut. Walker, and Lieut. A. C. Hamilton, who were both playing in the Interport Cricket Trial. Lieut. Robert and Lieut. Galletly were also notable absentees.

The game was very scrappy, the Club outsiders continually breaking down, fumbling and passing wildly despite the fact that the Club pack was getting an equal share of the ball from the light scrums.

The only score in the first half was the result of a forward rush, Walters touching down for the Army. Shortly after the commencement of the second half Ferguson scored the Club's only try after a good combined movement. The final score came when an Army pass intercepted in the Club's half and passed to Bromley, who went over. The goal kicking was not of a high standard, none of the tries being converted. The Club also had an excellent opportunity of levelling scores when the Army were penalised in their own twenty-five, but the kick went wide.

Hutchison, who played a very promising game, had hard luck with a drop at goal in the last few minutes, the ball just going outside the post.

Lieut. Crewe-Read was injured in the first half and did not return after the interval.

The Club was represented by—

ARSENAL'S BIG ACHIEVEMENT

(By "The Pilgrim").

So far as Hongkong is concerned, China's new tennis champion remains but a name. Yesterday a huge crowd turned up at Causeway Bay to see this new title holder, Hsu Cheng-chi, who had so completely celled up Khoo Hool-hye.

But there was no Hsu. Taul Vail-pul, his opponent was present. So were the crowd. And both waited until an hour after scheduled time, but in vain.

Hsu, it appears left the boat yesterday by launch whilst the officials of the C.R.C. were still scouring the cabins and decks.

And the tennis player was not seen again until 4 o'clock when somebody discovered him in the Gloucester Building.

Apparently the proposed exhibition at the C.R.C. was hurriedly arranged in Shanghai and was not subsequently confirmed.

TSUI'S CONFIDENCE. Taul Vail-pul was very disappointed. He told me that he felt confident he could beat Hsu on a grass court. The Batavian player was essentially a hard court exponent.

Taul was also disappointed in Nanking. He should have met Khoo Hool-hye in the singles, but the Shanghai champion decided he wanted to play in the doubles, so that Wong was pitted against the Hongkong player, with results already known.

Incidentally Taul found the soft sand surface of the Nanking courts extremely difficult. To maintain a foothold when on the run demanded more attention than could be given to strokes; conditions naturally very upsetting.

BOWLS SEASON COMES TO END.

Aitkenhead Shield Won By Hongkong.

Closing Day for the 1933 bowls season of the Hongkong Lawn Bowls Association was held on Saturday afternoon, ninety-six league players participating in the annual match for the Aitkenhead Shield, which was won by Hongkong by 80 shots, thus avenging their defeat by Kowloon last year. The trophy was first competed for in 1928, and in all Kowloon has won it four times, Hongkong's first victory being in 1931.

The competition, spread over twelve sittings, was played on the Civil Service, Police and Cranegowrie greens at Happy Valley, and the bowling was very keen. On the fifth head, the Island bowlers were in the lead by one shot and on the fifteenth they kept ahead by a small margin. However, Kowloon fell away, especially after the C.S.C. greens, where Hongkong finished up 38 shots in the lead.

On the Police green, Kowloon totalled 77 against Hongkong's 74, while on the C.C.C. green Hongkong gained the verdict by a single shot.

Both captains, A. W. Grimmett (Hongkong) and F. L. Rapley (Kowloon) skipped their respective rinks to victory. The biggest rink win was recorded by W. Muir who beat J. C. Brown's rink by 12 shots.

TO BE RELEASED

BRITISH JOURNALIST IN PRISON.

Berlin, Oct. 29.
Mr. Noel Pantor, Munich correspondent of the London Daily Telegraph, will be released next week, provided he leaves Bavaria immediately.

This confident announcement is made by persons in touch with the Bavarian authorities.

Meanwhile it has been arranged that the British Consul-General will see Pantor on Monday, probably to arrange for visits from Dr. Pantor, the journalist's brother, who arrived in Munich on Saturday.—Reuter.

OFFICIAL STATEMENT.

Pantor Suspected Of Obtaining Military Secrets.

Berlin, Oct. 28.
The first German official reference to the arrest of Mr. Noel Pantor, the London Daily Telegraph correspondent in Munich, on a charge of high treason, is contained in a statement issued here today.

Pantor is suspected of trying to illegally obtain military news. The statement alleges that he has, at some time, been in touch with a German in Munich, who is accused of espionage, and has been sending atrocity stories abroad. Inquiries are being made with reference to crimes which might result in high treason proceedings.

The British Consul-General in Munich, after visiting Pantor in gaol, is convinced that he is furnished with all the possible comfort for which he asked.

The British Foreign Office will not move in the matter until the receipt of the official despatch from the Embassy, which is expected during the week-end.

It is understood that a passage Mr. Pantor's dispatch to the Daily Telegraph, described the Nazis' review at Kelheim, and said that thousands of "unarmed" Storm Troops marched past with rifles and fixed bayonets at the slope. He also stated that a salute of 21 guns was fired in Hitler's honour. These facts, which were not contested, were also reported by other correspondents.

Low's Cartoon.

The London Evening Standard has been banned in Germany for a month owing to the famous cartoonist, Low, depicting Chancellor Hitler standing near a bonfire outside the League of Nations building, saying, "It worked at the Reichstag, why not here?"—Reuter.

JOURNALISTS ASSOCIATION.

Resolution Condemns Action of Bavarian Government

London, Oct. 28.

A resolution has been passed unanimously by the Executive of the Institute of Journalists in London expressing surprise and indignation at Pantor's arrest.

The resolution urges the British Government to make every effort to secure his release.—British Wireless.

"SHADOWS BY THE SEA"

Leonard. "Bright flannels are not fit for dark work. Good thing my trunk's turned up—you'll find a nice, sombre suit in that wardrobe."

"You know, you're full of happy ideas," remarked Napoleon, walking towards the wardrobe. "I feel as if I'm dressing for a funeral. The question that's worrying me is—whose funeral?" He paused at the wardrobe door. "Look here, I say, I won't find anything else in this jolly old wardrobe besides your suit, will I?"

"I sincerely hope not," replied Leonard.

"Boo!" called Napoleon, as he swung the door open.

"Ass!" laughed Leonard.

"Granted, but always remembers not a silly ass," said Napoleon, satisfying himself that all was well. "There is method behind most of my madness. I said 'Boo' for two reasons. One was to make you laugh, because I can't stand you when you're serious. And the other was to make sure that, if anybody in the wardrobe was going to scare me, I should scare him, too."

While Napoleon Truclovo exchanged his happy grey for a more sombre colour, Leonard gathered together a few interesting objects and placed them in a bag. They included, among other things, a strong flash-lamp and a hatchet.

"Haven't I seen Luigi chopping wood with that hatchet?" asked Napoleon, curiously.

"In a short while, I expect to be chopping wood with it."

"Oh, yes, of course—that dear little door on the wreck," nodded Napoleon, solemnly. "I say, Sefton, we are going to spend a jolly evening."

SOONG RESIGNS

H. H. KUNG APPOINTED AS SUCCESSOR

Shanghai, Oct. 28.
The report that the Chinese Finance Minister, Mr. T. V. Soong, had tendered his resignation earlier in the week, has now been confirmed. His resignation is due to the mounting financial difficulties of the Government.

Mr. Wang Ching-wei and Marshal Chiang Kai-shek are now exchanging telegrams with the Finance Minister, pressing the latter to withdraw his resignation.—Reuter.

RESIGNATION ACCEPTED.

Special Meeting of Central Political Council.

SUCCESSOR'S CAREER.

Nanking, Oct. 29.
The Central Political Council of the Executive Yuan, at a special meeting this morning, accepted the resignation of Mr. T. V. Soong from the posts of Finance Minister and vice-Chairman of the Executive Yuan.

Mr. H. H. Kung, Reserve Member of the Central Executive Committee, has been appointed as successor to both positions.

It is understood that Mr. Soong will retain his position as member of the Standing Committee on the National Economic Commission.

Following, Policy.

Dr. Kung, interviewed to-day, said he would follow Mr. Soong's policy and endeavour to reduce the budget deficit in every way possible.

He did not wish, he added, to make any changes in the personnel of the Finance Ministry.

Dr. Kung left for Shanghai on the night express.

Later to-day, Mr. Wang Chingwei telegraphed to Mr. Lin Sen, President of the Central Executive Council, who is in Fukien, informing him of Dr. Kung's appointment.—Reuter.

Mr. Hsiao-wei Kung, who succeeds Mr. T. V. Soong, is a native of the Shansi district and is a 75th descendant of Confucius. He has had a distinguished career, and was educated at Yale, where he took his M.A.

He became acting Minister of Finance in the Canton Government in 1928, became Minister of Industry in 1928, and was appointed a Member of the Kuomintang Central Executive Committee.

Mr. Kung has been State Councilor of the National Government since January 1932. He was appointed Special Industrial Commissioner to the U. S. and Europe earlier this year.

ENORMOUS DEFICITS.

Soong Urged to Remain on Economic Commission.

Nanking, Oct. 29.
The Central Political Council, which considered the resignation of Mr. T. V. Soong, was held under the Chairmanship of Marshal Chiang Kai-shek and lasted thirty minutes.

It was immediately followed by a meeting of the Central Executive Council, which took cognizance of the decision reached by the Central Political Council.

Following the two meetings a telegram is being drafted informing Mr. T. V. Soong that the Council has accepted his resignation as Finance Minister and vice-Chairman of the Executive Yuan, but urging him to remain on the Standing Committee of the National Economic Commission.

Interviewed after the meeting, Mr. Wang Ching-wei admitted that the National Government was facing a monthly deficit of over ten million dollars, and he doubted whether an immediate solution could be found.

He added, however, that the

NO NEGOTIATIONS.

JAPANESE MINISTER DENIES SINO-JAPANESE PARLEYS

Peking, Oct. 28.
An emphatic denial that he was engaged in negotiations with the Chinese and of the statement that Japan did not favour direct negotiations with China, but preferred to dispose of the Sino-Japanese problems piecemeal, was made by Mr. A. Arita, Japanese Minister to China, to-day.

He said that the only negotiations now in progress were between the military authorities and included postal affairs at Shanhaikuan, the establishment of customs stations on the Great Wall and the withdrawal of the Japanese inside Manchukuo.

He gave the opinion that, if Marshal Chiang Kai-shek's anti-Communist campaign proved unsuccessful the Reds might penetrate as far as the Yangtze valley, with disastrous results.—Reuter.

Government would go to the utmost limits in cutting down expenses in order to reduce the deficits.—Reuter.

Chiang Kai-shek Leaves.

Nanking, Oct. 29.
Following the conference at which Mr. H. H. Kung was appointed Minister of Finance, Marshal Chiang Kai-shek, accompanied by his wife, left for Nanchang by air at 2.45 p.m. yesterday.

Chiang Kai-shek, who made the trip to Nanking to see the political situation adjusted, could not remain longer, as the anti-Communist offensive in Kiangsi is now in full swing.

He was accorded a rousing farewell at the aerodrome from many of the most prominent citizens of Nanking, including Mr. Wang Ching-wei.—Reuter.

THE WORLD OF WOMEN

Boudoir Styles Buckle
Down to Organdy Belts

The newest note in tailored simplicity for the boudoir is a band which actually buckles on around the top of the skirt on your dressing table.
This dressing table, which has a charming skirt of red and blue plaid organdy, is ideal for a young girl's room. The bench matches the table.

YOUR CHILDREN.

By Olive Roberts Barton

"Competition is the life of trade."

Come to think of it, competition is the life of everything. It is the motive that keeps us interested in existence.

This is why it is good for children to play games. There is nothing selfish in trying to win. On the contrary, it is a very admirable quality.

Selfishness does not enter into it, however, when a child ceases to be a good loser—if he quits the game when he isn't ahead, or if he sulks, or gets mad. When that happens it is quite evident that he sets more store by his feelings than he should.

A Lost Opportunity.

At a picnic one day a little fellow left a peanut race and came back and sat down with his mother.

"What's wrong?"

"I don't want to race any more. I'm tired."

"Who won?"

"That boy with the red hair. He got a ball bat for a prize. He won the potato race and I'll bet he wins the sack race, too. No one else has a chance with him in it."

"Why don't you go into the other races with the younger boys?"

"What do you think I am—a baby?"

"There! The sack race is beginning. Look! Oh, the red-headed boy fell. See—that fat one is ahead. Watch him go. For goodness sake—he's won it."

"That big dummy I didn't think he could win anything. I could beat him all hollow."

"If you'd stayed in perhaps you would have won. The races are all over now."

"Gee, I wish I'd stayed in," he declared.

This boy hasn't much idea of sportsmanship. Anything he cannot excel in loses its interest for him.

Learning to Excel.

If one has a child like this there is one way to change his point of view.

This is to try to get him to beat himself—his own record, rather.

Time him when he runs to the corner. Each trip let him try to cut a second or two off his own time. See how many times he can bat a ball and add one more hit each day to his score.

Encourage him to excel himself in as many ways as possible.

After a while his point of view changes. When he goes into games with other boys he will be interested in seeing how well he can do.

No boy becomes a good "teamster" until he loses that thin-skinned sensitiveness about failure.

Let him fix his mind on victory—yes. That is wholesome enough, but when he loses in fair play it will certainly be a fine thing if he says: "I'm a little better today than I was yesterday."

and mean it.

GLORIFYING YOURSELF

By Alicia Hart

Include a few simple health rules in your beauty plans for fall. It is difficult to attain true beauty if you are not in good health. Shiny hair, smooth skin and a nice figure will probably be yours if you see that your body is in good condition.

Of course, you've heard many times that everyone should drink from eight to ten glasses of water every day. Do you do it? Begin with two full glasses of lukewarm water in the morning.

Water cleanses the digestive tract and will often go far toward clearing a yellowish skin.

See your doctor frequently. Only a physician can tell you if there is anything organically wrong. But between visits to the doctor, map out a health routine for yourself.

Everyone needs exercise and most of us do not get nearly enough. Plan to walk part of the way to work each day and try to do a few simple setting-up exercises when you get out of bed in the morning.

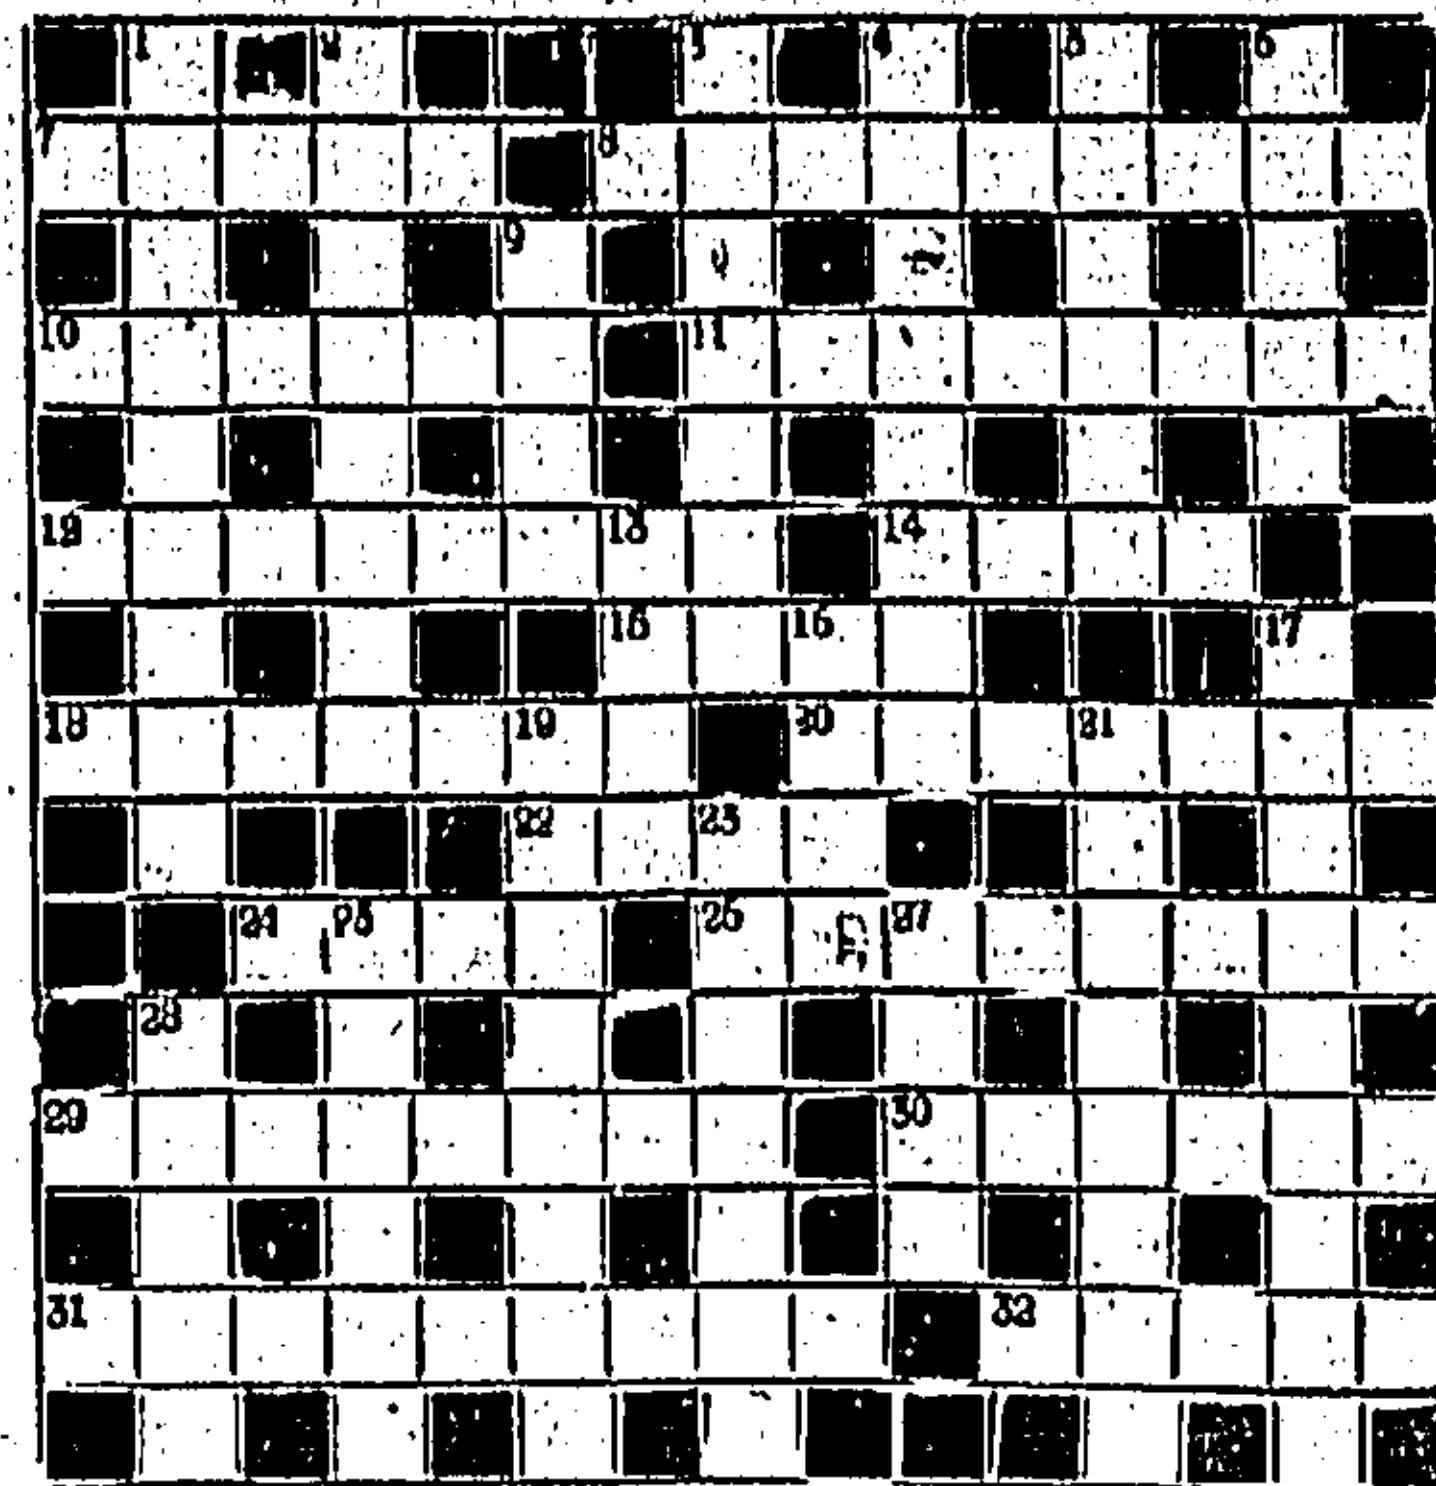

Cold showers stimulate a sluggish circulation. Take a cool shower every morning for a month and see if you don't feel better.

Swagger Suit

Coat linings go gay, this autumn. Some are brightly striped, others vivid, contrasting colours to give life to sombre outer things. Even when it's a cheery plaid suit, such as this blue and white plaid swagger suit that Helen Vinson wears, the coat lining is a brighter, arresting blue. The shirt-blouse, with its shiny buttons, matches the lining, which is another new wrinkle.

A Summer Mystery BY J. JEFFERSON FARJEON

CHAPTER XII.

"Preparations for a Jolly Evening."

An hour later, while Leonard Softon was sitting on the edge of his bed, with his room in darkness, there came a soft tapping at the door, and Napoleon Truelove entered.

"Must it be dark?" queried Napoleon, his hand groping for the switch.

"It is preferable dark," replied Leonard, in a low voice, and Napoleon's hand dropped. "Close the door and don't talk loudly."

"Oh, anything to oblige," murmured Napoleon, as he obeyed. "We're going to have a thoroughly nasty, creepy time, so we might as well begin in style." The door was now closed, and he began to feel his way forward. "Do I sit down, or do you receive your visitors standing. I'll curtsy, if you like, and kiss your hand."

"Don't be an idiot," replied Leonard, smiling in the darkness. "I tell you, old chap, I've simply got to be an idiot," retorted the other. "It's the only way I can keep my pecker up."

"Yet I heard you shouting in the drawing-room that you had as much courage as anyone."

Napoleon chuckled. "That's true," he laughed. "Whatever sort of an ass I'm making of myself up here, it's nothing to the ass I made of myself down there. Luckily, Guy began chipping me, so that gave me a lead off. I told 'em that no one had a corner in courage, and that, if it came to a pinch, we could all do our share. I behaved like a jolly old fellow, and tootled out the trashiest toshi. As a matter of fact—"

"I paused for an instant," Napoleon said, "but I really did feel just a tiny bit jealous when you went off with Miss Haines, you know. Not that I—oh, well, chuck all that! Anyway, I swore I'd rove over to the wreck to-night for twopence, and though nobody believed me for a moment, if I did do any such silly ass thing—well, there'd be no questions asked."

"You're a brick," answered Leonard, sincerely. "I'll stand sponsor for your courage, when the time comes."

"Don't be too sweetly sure," observed Napoleon, grimly. "The time hasn't come yet."

"But it will. And, meanwhile, I understand you've come to ask me where you can find a boat, and, learning of your insane intention, I insist on accompanying you."

"That's the plan," grinned Napoleon. "My courage cools somewhat, I expect, and, when it comes to the point, I'm only too glad to accept the invitation of my rival to join the little party."

"You don't want the rival to go alone?" queried Leonard, with momentary doubt.

"I damn well do want the rival to go alone," answered Napoleon, "but for the honour of my namesake I ain't going to let him go alone. Besides, I've got a sort of a bet on with that fool Guy, and at least I stand to make five shillings out of this. I think I'll buy a tonic with it—"

"Sh! Don't talk so loudly," muttered Leonard, suddenly.

"Loudly? I wasn't—"

"Sh!"

Napoleon remained silent, obediently. What was the jolly idea, he wondered? This silence, and this sitting in the darkness. . . .

"Hear anything?" whispered Leonard.

"You bet, I do," Napoleon whispered back. "It's going three hundred to the minute."

"Hear anything else?"

Napoleon listened. No, he heard nothing else. He was about to say so when a faint sound came from the wall to the right of the window.

"What is it?" he asked, in a low voice. "Cupboard door over there, isn't there?"

"It isn't a cupboard door. It's a door opening into the next room."

"Oh, Lord! I hope it's locked!"

"Of course, it's locked. But do you know who sleeps in the next room?"

"Yes. Old Griddle."

"Are you sure?"

"Quite. I know, because I had that room myself first, and gave it up when he came."

"Well, he's not asleep now— which a man with a headache ought to be," commented Leonard. "It seems to me Mr. Griddle spends all his evenings saying he's going to bed, but never getting there. He's been by that door for twenty minutes—"

"Unless it's a mouse?" suggested Napoleon.

"It's not a mouse."

"Well, pr'aps you know mouse noises better than I do. Oh, Lord—here's an idea! Pr'aps the old chap really is in bed, and it's somebody else in his room?"

This idea was arresting. Leonard considered it. Suddenly he jumped up from his bed and ran out of the room. Napoleon heard him knocking on the next door.

"Mr. Griddle!" called Leonard. There was no reply at first, and he called again. Then a sleepy voice responded, in mumbling tones:

"Eh? What's that?"

"Did you call out just now?" asked Leonard, through the door.

"Who's there? Who's that speaking?" Mr. Griddle called back. He now seemed thoroughly awake.

"I thought I heard you calling."

"Calling? No, I didn't call."

"Sorry," said Leonard, apologetically. "I must have been mistaken."

He returned to his room, closing the door softly after him. The tall, angular figure of Napoleon Truelove was vaguely outlined against the bay window.

"Come over here," whispered Leonard, and, taking Napoleon by the arm, led him to another smaller window to the left of the bay, and further away from Mr. Griddle's room.

"What happened?" asked Napoleon. "We are havin' a lovely time!"

"The old fellow answered me from his bed."

"That'd be on the farther wall," murmured Napoleon. "At least, that's where the bed was when I slept in it."

"The voice was from the farther wall. So our question is—was Griddle there all the time, or did he slip over quickly while I slipped out? Did you hear anything, Truelove?"

"The mouse did seem just a little busy. Look here, I say, couldn't we have the dear little light up? You know, I'd positively adore a few seconds of jolly old illumination!"

"Not just yet, old chap. Tell me, is there a light-house out there?"

"Light-house? You do jerk one's mind about?"

"Or a light-ship?"

"No."

"Then—look out of the window—quick! How do you account for that?"

Napoleon looked out of the window, and his heart began to misbehave itself again. A little yellow gleam glowed through the blackness. The next moment, it was gone.

"Whew!" muttered Napoleon. "That's the fourth time I've seen that light."

"I've been watching. That's why I've been sitting in the dark."

"Ah," said Napoleon, and grew very thoughtful. "And you thought it might be a light-ship?"

"One considers all possibilities."

"Oh, yes. By all means. And as it isn't a light-ship, you think it comes from our blessed old wreck?"

"That's fairly obvious."

"The blessed old wreck you and I propose to row out to."

"Yes."

"Ah," said Napoleon again, and grew even more thoughtful. "You know, I'm going to tell you something, and I'd like you to make a note of it, to stick in my obituary, he went on, after a pause. "I'm a damned good sport."

"I agree to that," replied Leonard, and Napoleon found his hand gripped in the darkness. "But I'll think no less of you, if you want to back out now."

"Liar!" grunted Napoleon. "And look here, the next time you stick your jolly old paw out like that, toot your hooter or something. Thanks for the intention, and all that, but you made me jump. Back out? Well, s'pose I did back out? What'd you do?"

"I'd have to make the trip alone."

"Oh. You'd still make the trip?"

"Of course."

"Why?"

"Don't you know?"

"Pr'aps I do—but I love conversation."

"I'll tell you why," said Leonard, smiling. "That is, one reason why. You rather like Miss Haines, don't you?"

"No."

"Then—look out of the window—quick! How do you account for that?"

"The blessed old wreck you and I propose to row out to."

"Yes."

"Ah," said Napoleon again, and grew even more thoughtful. "You know, I'm going to tell you something, and I'd like you to make a note of it, to stick in my obituary, he went on, after a pause. "I'm a damned good sport."

"I agree to that," replied Leonard, and Napoleon found his hand gripped in the darkness. "But I'll think no less of you, if you want to back out now."

"Liar!" grunted Napoleon. "And look here, the next time you stick your jolly old paw out like that, toot your hooter or something. Thanks for the intention, and all that, but you made me jump. Back out? Well, s'pose I did back out? What'd you do?"

"I'd have to make the trip alone."

"Oh. You'd still make the trip?"

"Of course."

"Why?"

"Don't you know?"

"Pr'aps I do—but I love conversation."

"I'll tell you why," said Leonard, smiling. "That is, one reason why. You rather like Miss Haines, don't you?"

JAPANESE BUDGET DIFFICULTIES

BIG SLASH IN DEMANDS

Tokyo, Oct. 26.

The Accounting Bureau of the Finance Ministry completed its preparatory study of the budget of various Ministries yesterday and the Finance Office will hold its first budget conference to-morrow afternoon at the official residence of the Finance Minister, Mr. K. Takahashi, to make a final decision. The conference is expected to continue at least a week.

Rollable information indicates that the Bureau approved of only ¥630,000,000 out of the ¥1,400,000,000 demanded for "fresh enterprises" for the next fiscal year. This was done in accordance with an agreement that the budget for "fresh enterprises" should be cut to one half of the amount requested in order to establish a sound financial programme. The budgets of the Army and Navy are reported to have been touched very little pending the decision of the Finance Minister at the Finance Ministry Conference.

The total budget thus approved by the Accounting Bureau calls for expenditures of approximately ¥2,050,000,000, including the running expense of various Ministries estimated at ¥1,420,000. Supposing this amount to be the final budget, the Government will have to issue public bonds for about ¥580,000,000 to cover the deficit. It is considered certain, however, that the final budget for next year will be far larger than this amount due to the addition of items of a political nature by the government. In the end, the budget total is expected to exceed ¥2,300,000,000.

They are said to have added that if Dr. Grau San Martin proposes to remain at the helm he must drop Secretary of the Interior Gutierrez from the cabinet and remove Chief of Police Ulpiano Franco.

The political situation has been quiet recently, since the bloody battle at the National Hotel between the troops and barricaded former officers, leading to hopes that order might be maintained and United States diplomatic recognition extended to the Grau government.

JAPANESE MOVE THAT FAILED

Abortive Effort With Mongolian Princes

Peking, Oct. 26.

Mr. Wu Hsiang-shan, Director of the Nanking Office for the various Mongolian Banners and Leagues, who is on a visit here, announced that the Central Government recently adopted a set of seven general principles. These principles called, inter alia, for co-operation between the Mongolian banners and leagues and the Central Government; enforcement of local autonomy under the direction of the Central Government; co-operation between the Mongolian banners and leagues and the various provincial and district authorities; and co-operation between the Mongolian princes and the general population.

Mr. Wu also disclosed that the Japanese attempted to convene a conference of Mongolian princes at Dolonor in September, which, however, turned out a failure, as the princes made only a feeble response to the Japanese invitation.

HOW DR. NIELSEN ESCAPED

AGED MISSIONARY SAFE AT HSIUYEN

Tokyo, Oct. 26.

An official despatch has reached the Foreign Office from Gen. Hishikari, Japanese Ambassador at Changchun, reporting in detail the release of the American missionary, Dr. Niels Nielsen, from bandits yesterday morning.

After Dr. Nielsen's capture in April last, the despatch says, a punitive expedition was started in conjunction with Japanese troops, but the bandits so frequently changed their base from mountain to mountain that the rescue work was rendered extremely difficult.

When the Japanese garrison was later informed of the exact location of the bandits' lair, this place was surrounded. Taking advantage of the ensuing confusion, Dr. Nielsen escaped from the outlaws and reached Hsiuyen safely yesterday morning.—Reuter.

ARMY MANOEUVRES OVER

JAPANESE SHAM FIGHT ENDS IN TRUCE

Fukui, Oct. 26.

The third and last day of the autumn grand manoeuvres of the Japanese Army began with terrific "fighting" along the Kuzuryu river at dawn to-day. Leaving the general headquarters in the Fukui Prefecture Government building at 6.45 o'clock a.m. Emperor Hirohito supervised the manoeuvres personally on his favourite horse, Shinyuki, which means "White Snow."

The wind was bitterly cold. Both "South" and "North" armies were seen crossing the river in efforts to deliver the final blow. A truce was announced at eight o'clock and the Emperor returned to headquarters at 8.20.

The grand review will take place to-morrow morning under the command of Lieut. Gen. Yoshikatsu Aramaki, commander of the 9th Division.

JAPANESE MINISTER DENIES SINO-JAPANESE PARLEYS

Peking, Oct. 28.

An emphatic denial that he was engaged in negotiations with the Chinese and of the statement that Japan did not favour direct negotiations with China, but preferred to dispose of the Sino-Japanese problems piecemeal, was made by Mr. A. Ariyoshi, Japanese Minister to China, to-day.

He said that the only negotiations now in progress were between the military authorities and included "postal" affairs at Shanhaikuan, the establishment of customs stations on the Great Wall and the withdrawal of the Japanese inside Manchukuo.

He gave the opinion that, if Marshal Chiang Kai-shek's anti-Communist campaign proved unsuccessful the Reds might penetrate as far as the Yangtze valley, with disastrous results.—Reuter.

SIR ROBERT HORNE WARNS U.S. GOVERNMENT

New York, Oct. 28.

A warning against a sterling and dollar depreciation war, which, he said, would prompt Britain to do something to defend her trading position, was given by Sir Robert Horne in a speech here.

During his speech, Sir Robert Horne discussed the National Industrial Reconstruction Administration's gold scheme and suggested an informal understanding with a view to limiting the disparity between the two currencies.—Reuter.

REFUSING TO FIGHT

When the air is lively with war talk, the conscientious objector controversy also emerges into the front rank of discussion. The idea of refusing to fight has been making progress in many countries. In Britain young men of Oxford passed resolutions declaring their intention of refusing to take up arms to defend King and country; and the subsequent correspondence in the newspapers sufficiently indicated the prevalence of the view that war might be rendered impossible if men refused to serve. In France a number of cases have been dealt with by the courts; and large bodies of those who are most closely associated with the education of the young have advocated individual refusal to participate in the defence of the nation. It is obvious that a distinction is not always drawn between the making of war and the resistance to an attack. If men everywhere were resolved on peace they could make warfare impossible. But a question arises whether it is desirable or even possible for a relatively small number of persons in a limited number of countries to defy the general opinion that it is a duty to resist invasion. Logically this conception of conscientious objection must lead to the complete and immediate surrender of the most enlightened and pacific countries to forces which are reactionary and belligerent. Certainly no more difficult problem could be presented to the individual. It may be that he is not in accord with the policy of his nation. It may be that he genuinely believes in a higher duty than that of obeying the duly accredited authorities. Yet the distinction between the bad citizen who shirks his civic responsibilities and the good citizen who is moved only by the dictates of a noble humanity is exceedingly hard to draw. In present conditions, while war is to be abhorred, it is scarcely feasible to permit the individual to decide whether his country is in danger, whether his country should lay down its arms before a conquering army. Just as disarmament can be effected only by international accords, and not by the initiative, which may prove to be imprudent, of a particular nation, so the establishment of peace is not a matter of particular judgment, but must be national and indeed international in its operation. More than ever must all men of good will work to fortify the institutions of peace. They must within their own countries and outside of them, band themselves together to declare that they will take no step which will lead to war, and will take many steps which will lead to peace. It is often asked whether those who loudly intimate their resolve to stand aside from the defence of their country, though it be unjustly attacked, would in

NOTES OF THE DAY

EDUCATING THE WORLD

It is exactly a hundred years ago since the British Government first made grants towards the education of its citizens. The grants were meagre enough—only £20,000—and these were limited to financial assistance, to voluntary societies for the erection of new school buildings. Yet this step was a momentous one in the history of the world. It was the first recognition, however inadequate, by a Great Power of the right of its humblest citizens to receive the benefits of education. Other States followed the lead of Great Britain, until to-day not only does every civilised State demand that all its citizens shall receive at least a minimum of education, but grants larger than that made by the British Government a hundred years ago are to-day made by her towards the education of native tribes in Central Africa who are now citizens of the British Empire but whose very existence was unknown at the time when our centenarians first saw the light of day.

INTERNATIONAL CONCERN

Education has now become not only a matter of first class national importance, but one of international concern as well. Well did the late Viscount Grey declare that the world must either learn or perish! The desperate need of the moment is to train citizens in every country to understand the nature of the new and unified world into which they have been born. All attempts to treat the world as if it were still made up of isolated units simply land us into the mess and confusion into which the world is plunged to-day. The International Committee on Intellectual Co-operation of the League of Nations, which is composed of some of the greatest intellects in the world, has a special committee which is assisting educationalists throughout the world to carry out this task. There is no more urgent one.

WHEN TRADES UNIONS UNITE

History has had some lessons to teach the members of the great trades unions in Britain, and experience has taught them to recognise certain danger signals warning them to look carefully before they act. Such a danger signal scores of thousands of railwaymen see in the proposal for amalgamation of the National Union of Railwaymen with the Transport and General Workers. It might seem obvious that these two powerful organisations should unite. Railway companies employ large numbers of drivers of road vehicles. Again, the same undertaking in the London area runs electric railways, trams and omnibuses. A similar situation exists for canal and dock workers. There is obviously a strong case for the trade-unionist point of view of bringing all these men into a single combination. But certain practical difficulties are immediate, and certain dangers which, as has been proved in the past, have threatened unions, industries and even the safety of the nation.

DEEP PROBLEMS

But the railwaymen cannot forget that in 1914 an ambitious alliance was formed known as the "Triple Alliance," between the three key unions of Great Britain—the railwaymen, the transport workers and the coal miners—and that in 1921 that alliance was put to the test and, happily for the country, broke down under it. That was five years before the famous general strike. The incident showed that such amalgamations of interests, which were not identical, might precipitate conflicts national in their scope. There are many possibilities of grave danger under such a combination as is now proposed. The members scent the possibility of a vast conflict involving their union and the whole country for some dispute not their own. That is why their recent delegate conference refused to take a decision which would commit them too far, and has contented itself with appointing a committee to "consider" the circumstances which have produced the difficulties of organisation within the industry.

fact take up an individual position. Probably most of them would not; probably most of them would rally to their country were it the victim of aggression. But in the meantime, they can only encourage bellicosity among those who may be awaiting a propitious moment for attack. The problem is a social problem rather than an individual problem. It is one whose solution can only be found by co-operative action of a constructive character. It is not in the disintegration of the nation, but in the integration of mankind, that the remedy for war can be discovered.

"THERE WILL BE NO NEW WAR"

PRESIDENT MASARYK'S FAITH IN DEMOCRACY

By A. B. AUSTIN

"DEMOCRACY," SAID PRESIDENT MASARYK, "has not withered. It is a growing plant." President Masaryk, eighty-three, philosopher, professor, creator of Czechoslovakia, sat in his garden at Topolcany, three hundred miles east of Prague. On his right the Slovakian forests began, climbing up to the Carpathian spurs on the Polish frontier. On his left the vineyard slopes dwindled away to the Hungarian plain. At his back rose a white, sun-washed wing of Topolcany, Habsburg summer palace—once, "You have some questions for me?"

I had. For fifteen years President Masaryk has ruled—three times elected—keeping Czechoslovakia out of the newspapers. Fifteen years since the Armistice, during which Europe has known the Fascist revolution, the rise of Plaudski, Austria's and Hungary's financial troubles, Roumania's dynastic affairs, Stalin's elimination of his political rivals, the growth of Nazism in Germany.

Of Czechoslovakia, the newest State, the westernmost Slav colony, lapped by Masaryk from the old Habsburg Empire, we have heard next to nothing. A share in the world's economic distress, of course, but of Fascist or Socialist revolution, violent changes of government, not a whisper. Could it be that there, at the very core of Europe, was one exception to that general collapse of democracy so positively proclaimed by Signor Mussolini in his Morning Post articles? Or was the germ of democratic decay to be found in Czechoslovakia also? In Prague I had heard hints—Nazi frontier incidents, a Nazi party among Czechoslovakia's three million Germans, fear of the revival of the old "drang nach Osten" spirit in the new Germany, vague talk of a Slav alliance against "pan-Tautonia," a prickly diplomatic neighbourhood with Hungary, bereft of her Slovakian province.

I fumbled for clear expression of that general thought. President Masaryk gave me one of his quick, infrequent glances that are like the sparkle of mica in granite. "People who say that democracy has failed are not right," he said. "Consider the world—the United States, Great Britain, the British Dominions, France, Holland, Belgium, Switzerland, Norway, Sweden, Denmark, Czechoslovakia, all democracies or constitutional monarchies. But they differ in form, and they are not static. Each is developing, adapting its governmental institutions."

"Democracy is developing. Why be impatient? Why assume, because a dictatorship has been established here and there, that democracy has failed? Democracy is not incompatible with dictatorship, under certain conditions. During the War, for instance, the Governments of democratic countries became almost dictatorships. That did not destroy their democratic institutions."

"But democracy must be guided by experts, by those who know. In Czechoslovakia the constitution gives the President power to appoint Ministers. It does not say

"Two months behind on the rent and you turn away pupils because they haven't enough talent."

The Very Idea!

PARTY PARTICULARS

By Edward Kelly, Host.

IN view of the imminence of the festivities invariably associated (what big words you have, grandmother!) with this time of the year, we think it's about time we started to give hints on how to blow up balloons and other preparations for Halowe'en.

Two many people leave their preparations till the last minute and are caught in the act of telling the "boy" how to form fours and leap obstacles.

The careful party hostess will see that the sandwiches are cut at least a week beforehand. Oyster patties and other Hors d'oeuvres, as they say in France, may be left till later.

The thing, of course, is to make the party go with a swing. Indoor games should play a big part.

Puss in the Corner is a very nice game, especially when you have thirty six guests and only four corners. Pop Goes the Weasel is jolly if you can get hold of a suitable weasel, and it is so weaselly played. Not like Kiss in the Ring, which needs a certain amount of tact, lipstick and stamina.

The hostess should see that, right from the start, everyone is made to feel at home. With married men a good slap in the face as they enter the room will suffice.

Women should be spoken to in friendly, tactful way, such as "My, you do look haggard!" and little intimate touches like that.

The hardened host will find that a game of "Coming, Ready or Not?" is essential at various stages of the party.

The host invariably goes "IT". He counts a hundred while the guests scenter and hide. "IT" then cries in a loud voice "Coming—ready or Not!"

He then lights a cigarette, puts his feet up on the back of another chair, pours himself a rum, and says, "Well, thank heavens for a bit of peace and quietness."

After about half an hour the hidden guests will give themselves up voluntarily.

The game of "Murders" is still quite fashionable in some circles. You draw lots to see who is going to be the murderer, and nobody knows who it is. Then you put the lights out, and when the lights go on again you've got to find out who did it.

If you have your girl friend sitting next to you it's a splendid opportunity to grasp her hand.

It makes the game much more interesting if someone is actually murdered. People who insist on singing "She Was Only Somebody's Daughter" or "Beneath Thy Window" are good subjects and would never be missed. We have got rid of a lot of people this way.

The finish of a party is no less important than the start. The hostess will usually find herself with about twelve people who have missed the last ferry across the harbour, or who are not in a fit condition to travel.

The usual procedure is for the hostess to go to her husband and say in a hoarse, hysterical voice, "What the devil are we going to do with these confounded people!"

The husband answers, "Wasser-marrer!"

The wife then replies, "Bah!" She then returns to her guests and says:

"You really must stay with us to-night. You couldn't possibly go home now. Oh, no! No trouble at all! I'll soon fix you up."

Then, having got them all bedded down, she says to her husband, "Come on."

Then they leave the house, first setting fire to it in several places. This saves all the washing up.

PARDON US

Speaking of parties reminds us of our last trip home on a P. & O. liner. We don't mind admitting, for the sake of putting this one over, that we're not much of a sailor.

Our steward approached us confidently with a bottle in his hand when we told him about our qualms. "Here, take this," he said, "it'll fix yer, good'n proper."

We took it, and next morning never felt better. We searched for our steward with gratitude in our eyes, and our hand in our pocket.

"Where's our steward?" we asked another of the ilk. "Oh, Joe?" he enquired. "Why, he's down in his bunk, fair out to it, he's senesick!"

KOWLOON JUNIOR SCHOOL

To-day's Prize-Giving Ceremony

WELCOME TO MRS. A. O. BRAWN

Prior to the presentation of prizes at the Kowloon Junior School this morning, Miss Cooper, Headmistress of the school, took the opportunity to extend a welcome to Mrs. A. O. Brawn upon her return from Australia.

The prizes were presented by Mrs. Brawn, who, at the conclusion was presented with a beautiful basket of pink gladioli.

It gives me great pleasure to welcome Mrs. Brawn back after her long absence and we are all glad that she is able to be here and present our prizes to-day.

The school has had a good year's work and the attendance has been excellent. The Royal Drawing Society's results are especially gratifying. Six entered for Division 1 and ten for Preparatory and all passed with honours. The R.D.S. report reads: "Surface description of texture especially good. Very successful in Division 1 and Preparatory."

The new Drill Hall, which we badly needed, has now been erected and the premises have been re-painted.

We owe thanks to the Kowloon Cricket Club for the use of their garden to help with heavy work in the school gardens; to Mrs. Toore who supplied us with seedlings and gave her valuable advice on several occasions; to the Kowloon Dock Co. for the use of bins and Mr. Jenner who arranged them so beautifully and to the Committee of the Kowloon Union Church for the loan of chairs and to the staff for their good work during the year.

Mr. Brawn's Speech.

Addressing those present, Mr. A. O. Brawn, Inspector of English Schools, said:

Before Mrs. Brawn gives away the prizes, I have a few explanations to make. First of all, the Director of Education wishes me to express to you, the children, their parents and the staff, his regrets at being unable to be present on account of a previous engagement.

Next, I have to explain why it is that we are having this function to-day without the customary concert or entertainment by the children. Really, the University of Hongkong is to some extent responsible because the Matriculation examination of the University of Hongkong will, in 1935 and in future years, be held before the summer vacation instead of in November and to fit in with that arrangement, it has been necessary to change our school year.

In the past, our school year has begun on January 1 and ended on December 31, but, in the future, it will end on July 31. This year, we are finishing at the end of October instead of at the end of December. That means that the children and the staff of the school have to compress in seven months the work that they would ordinarily do in nine months. So, it was impossible on that account to spend any time preparing an entertainment for you. Miss Cooper has just told me that about Christmas she hopes to give you an entertainment by the children.

The work of the school during the past year seems to me to have been very satisfactory. I do not speak with so much assurance as usual because I have been away myself from the Colony a part of the year so I have not seen quite so much of the school as usual. Also the last examination papers are still lying in my office unopened. I have not yet had time to look at them, but when I do, I shall be satisfied with what I see.

In two or three months, the Headmistress of this school, Miss Cooper, will be going on leave. I hope she will have a pleasant holiday. Before she goes I hope that we will welcome back two other members of the staff, Miss Steele and Miss Bennington. It was at this function last year that I wished them a pleasant holiday and hoped that they would not be "pinched." As I have not yet heard of their being "pinched" while on leave, I hope to see them back at the school soon.

Tree Planting Ceremony

At the conclusion of the prize-giving, little Marilyn Miners and Alistair Rait presented Mrs. Brawn with a beautiful basket of pink gladioli.

A vote of thanks was given to Mrs. Brawn by Mrs. Ingram on behalf of the parents.

Later, Mrs. Brawn planted a small tree in the school garden as a permanent memory of her visit to the school. Mr. Brawn remarked at the conclusion that his wife ought to know how to plant trees because she had spent four and a

BRILLIANT DISPLAY OF DANCING

Saturday's Gala At The Peninsula Hotel

A brilliant farewell performance by Don and Sally and the best exhibition of ballroom dancing given by J. A. Andrew and Miss Ursula Preston since their arrival in Hongkong were features which contributed to an especially enjoyable and successful gala night at the Peninsula Hotel on Saturday.

Don and Sally first gave their tango which had previously delighted hotel patrons, but their second number was the piece de resistance, and the large crowd simply clamoured for more.

In this dance Don and Sally accomplished some remarkably fine movements with a finale which brought the house down.

Equally entertaining were Andrew and his partner. Their first offering was a quick-step for which they were given a very generous reception.

Their second appearance, billed as a novelty number, turned out to be a solo tap dance by Miss Preston, which proved very conclusively that her prowess in tap-dancing is not confined to the ballroom dances.

Finally she and her partner demonstrated a waltz. This is by far their best number, and so delighted the onlookers, that an encore was insisted upon, and the dancers performed the rumba, the English version of which offers a very dignified and graceful study in movement.—S.A.G.

ANNEXATION DENIED

REPORT RIDICULED IN TOKYO

PU-YI AS EMPEROR

According to a recent Chinese press report, the Japanese Government has decided to abolish the Manchoukuo Government and to annex Manchuria as an integral part of the Japanese Empire.

January 1, 1934, it was added, would probably be the day on which the change would be carried out. This report is denied and ridiculed by Japanese officials and others.

While however, Japan's annexation of Manchuria is considered extremely unlikely—especially as matters are at present—there are indications that certain changes and developments are possible in the comparatively near future.

Two recent events seem to bear closely on this possibility.

One was the arrival in Japan of Dr. Chao Hsin-po, chief of the Legislative Yuan of Manchoukuo, to carry out a close study of the Japanese Constitution and parliamentary system, and

The other was the appointment, on October 17, of Major-Gen. Genji Doihara—whose activities in the early stages of the Manchurian trouble won him the title of "the Japanese Lawrence of Manchuria"—as chief of the Mukden "Special Service Bureau."

SOONER OR LATER.

In a press interview given on his arrival in Tokyo, Dr. Chao, who is a Japanese-educated lawyer with a fluent knowledge of the Japanese language, asserted that it had already been decided to adopt the constitutional monarchy system in Manchoukuo "sooner or later," with Mr. Henry Pu-yi as Emperor. For this reason, he said, his studies in Japan would include the study of the Japanese Imperial House Law.

Dr. Chao is expected to remain in Japan about a year, after which he will return to Manchoukuo to draft the new Constitution, based on the result of his studies in Japan. The very fact of his having come to Tokyo for this purpose would, therefore, seem to indicate that, although the present form of administration in Manchoukuo is likely to undergo drastic revision, the main feature will be a change over to the monarchical system not to incorporate into the Japanese Empire by annexation.

CORRESPONDENCE

WAR TIME PILOTS REUNION

(To the Editor, Hongkong Telegraph.)

Sir,—It is proposed to hold a Reunion Dinner, on November 11th of Officers who served in either the Royal Flying Corps, Royal Naval Air Service, or Royal Air Force, during the Great War 1914-1918.

The object of this dinner is to enable old friends to meet and to maintain the spirit of the flying services during the Great War.

The cost of the dinner will be between $4 to $5 excluding wines. So as to enable the organisation to be completed in ample time, it is requested that all those interested will immediately communicate with "COCKPIT," P. O. Box No. 401, indicating their willingness to attend.

Full details and particulars will be forwarded to all interested parties as soon as the organisation details are complete.

Guests may be invited, but it is requested that these may be confined to persons connected with aviation as it is the desire of the organisers to make this Reunion a real "flying evening."

THE NAVY'S AIR ARM

EXERCISES BY THE "EAGLE"

NAVY DAY PRELIMINARY

Fighting planes whirring overhead, new in formation, now swooping to send a hail of machine gun bullets at a target which their parent ship was towing behind her, bombers dropping their deadly missiles from an altitude of 1,500 feet; destroyers plunging madly through a rough sea—the preliminary event in the programme for Navy Day in Hongkong was in progress off Waglan.

Residents of the Colony who were guests of the Senior Service on Saturday morning on three destroyers of the 8th Flotilla to witness some of the tactics which would be employed by fighting planes at sea in the time of war, had a thrill which they will long remember.

Nineteen planes with their parent ship, H.M. Aircraft Carrier Eagle took part in the manoeuvres; but unfortunately on account of the high wind and occasional showers part of the programme had to be cancelled.

Everything was provided for the comfort of the guests, even to the provision of oilskins and sweaters for those who left the cover of the awnings and braved the elements to get a better view of the proceedings.

At 8 o'clock the start was made from H.M. Dockyard. His Excellency the Governor, Sir William Peel, and Lady Peel, accompanied by a number of senior officers of His Majesty's Forces and other official guests boarded H.M.S. Keppel, the Flotilla Leader, as she lay alongside the West Wall East. Everything set, she pulled out and made for Lyemun. Ten minutes later she was followed by H.M.S. Wishart and H.M.S. Witch carrying other guests. In Junk Bay they picked up with H.M.S. Eagle which had been lying at anchor, and when the official guests had been transferred from the Keppel to the carrier the procession started seaward, the Wishart and Witch leading with the Eagle coming up astern with the Keppel as escort.

Just after the ships moved off they met the heavy swell and the destroyers started plunging and tossing. Several people on board who had gone below for coffee and breakfast, hurriedly made for the deck where they crowded every vantage point in readiness for the manoeuvres to commence. Some of the more venturesome took up positions on the fo'castle gun deck, while others made the bridge their grandstand.

Zero hour was set at 0930 and at that hour the display commenced abreast the Ninopins. The destroyers slowed down as the Eagle came up with the wind. Despite the monsoonal weather, the nine Hawker Sparrows took off the spacious deck without mishap, to roar upwards and southwards in three flights. They circled the destroyers in flight formation and then, one by one, swooped seaward. Their objective was a small target which the Eagle towed about 100 yards astern and as the planes passed just over the target the rattle of their machine guns was just audible. They passed on and again took up formation.

The first indication of the presence of the bombers was a message from the Eagle telling destroyers to "Keep clear of the bombs." Away in the distance, and coming from the direction of Kai Tak could be seen a squadron of ten Fairey III-F bombing machines. Coming overhead they circled and when about 1,500 feet up released their bombs. The deadliness of their aim was indicated by the clouds of smoke which rose as the bombs hit the water close to the trailing target. Then, taking up squadron formation, they passed on out of sight, to return a few minutes later from the north and conclude their performance with a maimed torpedo attack with the Eagle as their objective.

The fighting planes then came into action again and dived and swooped in a display of aerobatics. The adverse elements made it impossible to carry out the original programme, but they concluded with a spectacular manoeuvre in which three planes gave the formation known as the "Prince of Wales Feathers."

This brought the display to a close and the Eagle, accompanied by the three destroyers, turned back towards Hongkong. Passing one of the islands on route the Eagle's anti-aircraft guns were demonstrated. At the entrance to Lyemun Pass the Wishart and Witch left the Eagle, turned eastwards and made a detour back to harbour through East Lamma Channel and Sulphur Channel, including their passengers, shortly after noon at Murray Pier.

SPECIAL REPORTS OF THE WEEK-END FOOTBALL

HONGKONG'S "SHOCK" ATTACK FAILS

MORE LESSONS LEARNT FROM THE INTERPORT CRICKET TRIAL

(By "Cover Point")

Comparatively speaking, the third Cricket Interport trial on Saturday was an even worse failure than its predecessors. Certainly it revealed the utter impotence of the Hongkong shock attack on a disadvantageous wicket.

The trial also revealed that A. W. Hayward's eleven, which on paper looked like the probable Interport team, lacked bowlers. Although opposed to a team mediocre in batting strength, their bowlers still failed to make an impression even with the lighting conditions in their favour.

At the moment there is only one bowler really capable of adapting himself to a wet wicket, and that is A. R. Minu. But even he did not seem to be bowling very well on Saturday. T. M. L. Redmond was the only member of the attack to make an impression, but it was apparent that under severe punishment he was inclined to lose his head and become erratic. The ball with which he beat E. F. Fincher was, however, a beauty, coming very fast from the pitch and knocking the off stump. Minu, however, rather spoilt his bowling analysis by hitting him to all corners of the field, including a straight hit for six which landed on the screen. Redmond too claimed E. V. Williams' wicket, but I think the batsman contributed more to his downfall than the bowler. I have never seen Williams make such a sorry show. He tried to hook every ball, and in attempting to do so, he was out for a straight one from Redmond to the leg, missed and was out for obstruction.

THE SHOCK ATTACK.

A difficult problem will confront the selectors with regard to L. Garthwaite, Lt. Hamilton, G. C. Burnett, F. D. Pereira and F. Goodwin. It appears obvious that Hongkong's bowling attack will have to be entrusted to any two or three of these players.

Both Garthwaite and Hamilton have been utter failures in the trials. Garthwaite, although he captured three wickets on Saturday was far from impressive, while his batting was very patchy. He got some nice shots to the leg, but showed a decided weakness on the off. If it comes to choosing between these two players I think Garthwaite should be given the preference.

Hamilton is inclined to be too reckless as a batsman, and as a bowler far too erratic.

Burnett seemed to be off-colour, and was not bowling as usual. He was, however, unfortunate in not having Williams caught when the batsman skied a ball to the leg, and Rodrigues failed to take a running catch.

Goodwin and Pereira will provide a successful shock attack given a very hard wicket, but the least said about them on a wet wicket the better.

DIFFICULT CONDITIONS.

In all fairness to the bowlers, I must say that Saturday's conditions were sufficient to dampen the enthusiasm of any of them, furthermore, in spite of the fact that the wicket was all in their favour, the batsmen, except for Minu, Tam Pearce, S. V. Gittins and G. C. Burnett, showed but little enterprise, and the cricket was, on the whole, dull.

I think the best the selectors can do is to leave the choice of bowlers until the morning of the match, and then choose according to the weather conditions prevailing.

As for the probable match on Saturday between the Interport eleven and the Rest, perhaps the wisest course would be to have a trial pitting the probable Interport bowlers against the batsmen. It would be interesting to see how Hongkong's Interport batsmen fare against the selected bowlers.

St. Joseph's Lose Their 100 Per Cent Record

AFTER a month of football which had reached an unusually high standard, it was not altogether surprising during the week-end to find a reaction set in, and the football to revert to that type so common last season.

TWO games suffered very badly in this respect—Club v Police and South China v St. Joseph's,—whilst Kowloon supporters could find very little to console them in the fact that their team deserved to win against the Athletic, but didn't.

SPECIAL descriptive reports of the leading week-end matches will be found below.

TOO TIRED TO PLAY

DISPIRITED GAME YESTERDAY

S. CHINA BEAT THE SAINTS

(By "Veritas")

South China and St. Joseph's took such a long time to find their feet in their important league encounter at Caroline Hill yesterday, that by the time it was accomplished, they did not know what to do with them.

As a display of tired, insipid football, this game, won by South China by two clear goals, would be difficult to surpass. It was certainly not complimentary to either the champions or their potential challengers.

No wonder the spectators became puzzled about St. Joseph's 100 per cent record and shook a negative head over South China's championship claim!

The only players who appeared capable of lifting a foot faster than a small taking things was Leonard and A. Gosano, and this was more a case of necessity than of choice.

Pretty-Pretty Stuff

Fundamentally both teams made the big mistake of overdoing the "pretty-pretty" stuff. It was just ordinary playing about football and lacked the redeeming quality of being progressive.

Both teams fielded reserves, South China were without Leung In-chen in the half back line, and Ip Pak-wa in the attack, whilst St. Joseph's were minus the services of Gomes and Lawrence.

The Chinese surmounted their difficulties by bringing in Tong Kwan, sending Wong Moo-shun to centre-half, and bringing in Leung Tat-wing and Ng Po-kul among the forwards.

St. Joseph's attack had to deliver up Dave Leonard to partner A. V. Gosano at back, and Elms and Ward were introduced to the forward line.

South China were immeasurably superior. For fifteen minutes in the first half they shot at goal. Admittedly without much accuracy and from a distance which rarely troubled Marques. But the fact that the ball was constantly in the Saint's half only added confidence to the belief that it was a matter of time before the St. Joseph's goal fell.

Saints Should Have Scored

The Saints held out until the interval. They did it by desperate methods rather than any real ascendancy over the Chinese attack. They were further aided by the strange antics of Pau Ka-ping and his colleagues in front of goal. And as is not unusual with this type of game in which one side is right on top in mid-field, it was St. Joseph's who went nearest to scoring. In fact Rocha missed an absolute blitzer from a perfect pass by Ward, and the last named himself broke through in clever style shortly afterwards to send Wong Wing at full length to effect one of the most spectacular saves of the afternoon. But from that stage the South

NO FINISH

WHY KOWLOON LOST

DISAPPOINTING DISPLAY

(By "Wanderer")

For the second time this season a snap goal in the last minute of the game robbed Kowloon of a well-merited draw.

The Athletic's fast forward line were constantly dangerous in the first half and built up a lead of 3-1 at the interval. For the greater part of the second half, they were penned in their own half of the field and Elliot first reduced the lead with a nice header and then put Kowloon on terms with a dandy shot.

BREAKAWAY GOAL

The equaliser gave added stimulus to the game and although Kowloon swarmed around the Athletic goal-mouth, their concentration upon attack, justified in the circumstances, gave the opening for a sharp breakaway by the lively Athletic forward line in the closing minutes which ended in the downfall of Cord's charge. Willis had two opportunities of clearing, but he kicked the ball against an opponent's knees and rebounded to the scorer.

The Athletic showed Kowloon the way to solve upon their opening, their shooting being deadly. With twice as many opportunities the attack of the home side did not look nearly as dangerous.

China goal did not look like falling in a month of Sundays. Lau Mau and Li Tin-sang tightened their grip on a forward line which, with its retrogressive ideas of attack, just played into their hands.

Furthermore Bernie Gosano, who defeated his own ends by his aimless nomadic game, found in Leung Wing-chung a half back who had one too many tricks up his sleeve.

The only bright relief in a drab forward line came from Elms and Ward, the former meeting Lau Mau on his merits and not his reputation. If he had been given better support, South China might have been given cause for anxiety.

Complete Failure

The Saints half back line was a complete failure, and excessive labour was piled on Leonard and Gosano. Leonard played with great determination and made a great covering for Marques. Gosano was not so happy under pressure, and like others before him, found in Yeung Sul-yick a youngster with ideas and the skill to employ them to advantage. Apart from Leonard's holding up of the left wing, South China were pretty well on top in all departments. Wong Wing had only one difficult shot to save. Lau Mau and Li Tin-sang were as "safe as houses," and the half back line without blemish in their tackling.

Only the fact that they overdid the short passing game robbed the interval. Perhaps there is some excuse for them. South China had gained the full measure of them opponents after ten minutes, and doubtless felt themselves justified in giving expression to their superiority in the way they did.

Luckily for them it did not rest on their own heads. For this they have to thank St. Joseph's, who made the mistake of trying to ape them.

CLUB SCRAPE WIN AGAINST POLICE

FOWLER SAVES THE GAME

(By "Veritas").

Club 3 Police 2

IF the standard of football in this match had been as bright as the new jerseys donned by the Police, it would have sent a critical crowd away feeling satisfied and would have made a description of the game a happy task.

Actually it was the worst match I have seen this season. Both teams were at fault. Methodless, desultory, with tempers keyed up to an unusually high pitch, they aimlessly kicked their way through 70 minutes. And a section of the crowd sought relief in baiting the referee. Not the Club v Police encounter of 1933 will not go down to posterity as the brightest football match of the year!

Taking all things into consideration the Club had quite a legitimate claim to the two points. They were superior in that negative type of superiority of being the better of two bad teams. Yet until that final whistle they stood just as much chance of losing as of winning.

Shock Tactics

Shock tactics were the order of the day. Planned movements (with a rare exception here and there) were taboo. Funt the ball up the field and run for it. These were the attacks. Kick the ball as hard as possible and trust to luck. This was, in the main, the defence. Both applied equally to the two teams, so that if a stranger to football had been present he would have been excused had he ventured to suggest that there was no science in the game.

It is peculiar how players will go to extremes. The Club have apparently just realised that Howe is a potential goal scorer if given through-the-middle passes. So they put the idea into practice. Unfortunately two things went wrong. Firstly Howe was off colour and failed to make use of these new and probably unexpected opportunities and secondly the whole thing was overdone.

No matter what position Howe was in, no matter if he was covered by the whole of the Police defence, through went that ball, whilst Blackford and Fowler, unmarked in favourable positions, stood by and possibly wondered, as did I, what they had done to deserve such a boycott.

Pre-Determined

The value of all pre-determined attacking movements is in their judicious application, whether such movements be the through pass, the open attack of wing to wing, or close passing between the forwards and halves. (Continued on Page 2.)

MAMAK HOCKEY

CLEVER VICTORY FOR POLICE

The Police gained their second victory in the Mamak hockey tournament yesterday afternoon, when they defeated the Kowloon Indians Tennis Club by four goals to nil at King's Park. Leading at the interval, the only goal scored, the Police added three more goals in the second period of the game. C. Pile, Penfold, Perkins and Wans netted the goals for the winners.

The game was played at a fast pace, and was evenly contested throughout. Jessop, in goal, and Gough, at centre-half, played very well, while Hayward, making his debut at right back for the Police team, showed much promise.

Of the K.I.T.C. forwards, I. Singh and S. Singh were good, while in the defence Naidu played a hard game.

SIX GOALS FOR GERMAN CLUB

Against Corps. Of Signals

Unable to field a representative team for their Mamak Tournament fixture, a "scratch" German Club side of ten men met a weak Royal Corps of Signals eleven in a friendly match on the Marina ground on Saturday and won by 6 goals to 1.

Prächt, the German International, scored all six goals, while Short netted the only goal for the Signals.

Diocesan School Lose.
The Diocesan Girls' School hockey team lost by the odd goal in three to the "Y" Ladies in a friendly game on the School ground on Saturday.

The "Y" Ladies led by a goal scored by Miss M. Gittins in the first half. The School, equalised in the second half, through Miss M. Gittins, but Miss O. Daniels gave the "Y" Ladies just before full time.

METHODLESS FOOTBALL

They must be adopted to suit requirements. It was obvious on Saturday that Howe was a marked man, and it was equally obvious that as a result, the wingers enjoyed greater freedom.

The Police were out to stop Howe from scoring, which was the precise reason why Bickford and Fowler should have been given more of the ball.

Apart from these tactical errors, the Club forwards showed little improvement in their finishing. Howe ruined two glorious chances by not shooting first time and Ernie Strange was likewise to blame in the second half. This idea of walking the ball into the net is quite all right, providing you can give your opponent ten yards in 50.

Fowler was the brightest of the forwards. He is both a stickler and a player who can make use of opportunities. Both of his goals were due to this latter virtue, and there was nothing fluky about them.

Lowson's Great Display

Bickford was clever, but he seldom found Strange with him and being made to work on his own made the going rather severe for him.

Strange who is a natural individualist, and should be encouraged to develop this trait on right lines, would do well to forsake the fourth half back game and maintain closer touch with Bickford.

Dominy was thoroughly overshadowed by Chris Pile, whom I thought was the most artistic player on the field.

Back in the half line we had the Club players proving themselves great spoilers, but neglecting the other fundamental duty of attending to their forwards. Misdirected passes were the order of the day. Unfortunately for the Club this seems to be the order for every day, and until improvement is shown here, they will always find goal scoring a difficult matter.

Demond Hynes made a welcome appearance in the team at the last minute, and with Syd Strange, gave a demonstration of solid defending.

But the Big Man in the defence was Lowson, who, brought in to deputise for Fowler, gave a splendid display, saving two "certain goals," and making a grand effort to thwart Green from converting a penalty. He was only a fraction of a second too late with his dive across the goal, and although touching the ball, failed to deflect it. Throughout he handled the ball with confidence and made clearances. Fowler has a very sound understanding in Lowson.

No Constructive Ideas

My comments on the Club team might very well be applied to the Police. With them there was lack of concerted action; a team comparatively barren of constructive ideas, and forwards without the ability to push home their advantages so hard won from the middle of the field.

One found relief in the displays of McHardy in goal, Chris Pile at left back, Channing at centre-half, Shepherd at left half, and Britain and Green on the left wing.

Pile's skill in holding up the ubiquitous Fowler dealt admiration, and he also saved McHardy from a number of anxious moments.

Channing paid due and proper attention to Howe, and for the Police, with excellent results. Shepherd worked well on his left flank, but he too failed to give his forwards sufficient support.

The forward line was an odd assortment of combination. Gough was planted out on the right wing in the first half though Heaven knows why. The last time I saw Gough play he was scoring goals for the Artillery from the inside right berth.

How the Goals Came

The Club opened the scoring through Fowler, who neatly slipped in to snap up a good shot by Howe which was going astray. They held the lead up to the interval, after which the Police were awarded a penalty through Robertson handling, and Green equalised.

So far as Hongkong is concerned, China's new tennis champion remains but a name. Yesterday a huge crowd turned up at the Chinese Recreation Club at Causeway Bay to see this new title holder, Hsu Cheng-chi, who had so completely eclipsed Khoo Hooi-hye.

But there was no Hsu. Tsui Wai-pui, his opponent was present. So were the crowd. And both waited until an hour after scheduled time, but in vain.

Hsu, it appears left the boat yesterday by launch whilst the officials of the C.R.C. were still scouring the cabins and decks.

And the tennis player was not seen again until 4 o'clock when somebody discovered him in the Gloucester Building.

Apparently the proposed exhibition at the C.R.C. was hurriedly arranged in Shanghai and was not subsequently confirmed.

TSUI'S CONFIDENCE. Tsui Wai-pui was very disappointed. He told me that he felt confident he could beat Hsu on a grass court. The Batavian player was essentially a hard court exponent.

Tsui was also disappointed in Nanking. He should have met Khoo Hooi-hye in the singles, so that Wong was pitted against the Hongkong player, with results already known.

Incidentally Tsui found the soft sand surface of the Nanking courts extremely difficult. To retain a foothold when on the run demanded more attention than could be given to strokes; conditions naturally very upsetting.

HANDSOME WIN FOR THE M.C.C.

FRONTIER PROVINCES LOSE BY INNINGS.

Peshawar, Oct. 29.

The M.C.C. tourists defeated the North West Frontier Provinces by an innings and 135 runs.

The Provinces were completely routed by Nichols when they first went to the wicket, being sent back for 94. Nichols captured 5 for 28.

The M.C.C. replied with 350 for 7 declared, Mitchell scoring 84, Townsend 94, and D. R. Jardine 67.

In their second innings the Provinces were dismissed for 121.

HONGKONG RUGBY SEASON.

The Hongkong Football Club did not maintain the form of the previous week when vanquishing the Navy, as they had to bow to defeat in the first friendly fixture of the season against the Army at Soekumpoo on Saturday, by a score of 6 points (2 tries) to 3 points (1 try).

Neither side was at full strength, Witham and Goad being absent from the Club XV, Hutchinson and Gillard filling the vacant positions. The Army were without Lieut. Walker and Lieut. A. C. Hamilton, who were both playing in the Interport Cricket Trial. Lieut. Herbert and Lieut. Gallely were also notable absentees.

The game was very scrappy, the Club outsiders continually breaking down, fumbling and passing wildly despite the fact that the Club pack was getting an equal share of the ball from the tight scrums. In the loose the Army pack was superior, following up excellently. The only score in the first half was the result of a forward rush, Walters touching down for the Army. Shortly after the commencement of the second half Ferguson scored the Club's only try after a good combined movement.

The final score came when an Army three intercepted in the Club's half and passed to Bromley, who went over. The goal kicking was not of a high standard, none of the tries being converted. The Club also had an excellent opportunity of levelling scores when the Army were penalised in their own twenty-five, but the kick went wide.

Hutchinson, who played a very promising game, had hard luck with a drop at goal in the last few minutes, the ball just going outside the post. Lieut. Crewle-Read was injured in the first half and did not return after the interval.

The Club was represented by—

W. H. B. Riggs, J. J. Ferguson, J. Hutchinson, R. H. Griffiths, G. P. Lammer, A. F. Jenkins, J. A. R. Selby (captain), I. H. Bradford, G. McLellan, S. Stillard, G. C. Moutrie, A. F. Wallden, D. C. Cumming, G. A. Stewart, K. A. Munro, Major H. M. J. MacIntyre referred the game.

GREAT DAY FOR THE HOME TEAMS

GLORY TIME FOR THE LONDON FOOTBALL CLUBS

ARSENAL'S BIG ACHIEVEMENT

(By "The Pilgrim")

London teams carried off the principal honours in Saturday's Home football engagements, and their success served to give point to the growing weakness of some of last season's Midland and Northern star clubs.

Arsenal went to Birmingham to gain two points at the expense of Aston Villa who have now been beaten twice on their own ground. The main feature of the visitors was their excellent defence.

By virtue of this scarcely hoped for brace of points, the Highbury Club remain second to their local rivals of White Hart Lane whose 2-0 defeat of Middlesbrough was the easiest forecast of the day. Perhaps the best performance was witnessed at Wolverhampton where a rejuvenated eleven swept the Wednesday off their feet and won by four clear goals.

NO FEET OF CLAY.

In the Second Division the Hammers crept further up the table with the two points, called from their Lincoln visitors. Vic Watson who has long been the idol of the Upton Park crowd, distinguished himself by putting three into the net.

Port Vale retained their form in taking a point from Preston North End whilst Bolton, one point behind the leaders, revealed the weaknesses of the Craven Cottage club.

Thanks mainly to Penrice, Charlton beat Torquay by the largest margin of the day, scoring six times without reply, but the greatest praise is due Norwich who went to Exeter and won by the odd goal in seven. There is a bunch of strong clubs at the head of the Southern section and I expect

TO BE RELEASED*BRITISH JOURNALIST IN PRISONBerlin, Oct. 29.
Mr. Noel Panter, Munich correspondent of the London Daily Telegraph, will be released next week, provided he leaves Bavaria immediately.

This confident announcement is made by persons in touch with the Bavarian authorities.

Meanwhile it has been arranged that the British Consul-General will see Panter on Monday, probably to arrange for visits from Dr. Panter, the journalist's brother, who arrived in Munich on Saturday.—*Reuter.OFFICIAL STATEMENT.*Panter Suspected Of Obtaining Military Secrets.Berlin, Oct. 28.
The first German official reference to the arrest of Mr. Noel Panter, the London Daily Telegraph correspondent in Munich, on a charge of high treason, is contained in a statement issued here today.

Panter is suspected of trying to illegally obtain military news. The statement alleges that he has, at some time, been in touch with a German in Munich, who is accused of espionage, and has been sending atrocity stories abroad.

Inquiries are being made with reference to crimes which might result in high treason proceedings.

The British Consul-General in Munich, after visiting Panter in jail, is convinced that he is furnished with all the possible comfort for which he asked.

The British Foreign Office will not move in the matter until the receipt of the official despatch from the Embassy, which is expected during the week-end.

It is understood that a passage Mr. Panter's dispatch to the Daily Telegraph, described the Nazis' review at Kolheim, and said that thousands of "unarmed" Storm Troops marched past with rifles and fixed bayonets at the slope. He also stated that a salute of 21 guns was fired in Hitler's honour.

These facts, which were not contested, were also reported by other correspondents.

Low's Cartoon.The London Evening Standard has been banned in Germany for a month owing to the famous cartoonist, Low, depicting Chancellor Hitler standing near a bonfire outside the League of Nations building, saying, "It worked at the Reichstag, why not here?"—*Reuter.JOURNALISTS ASSOCIATION.*Resolution Condemns Action of Bavarian GovernmentLondon, Oct. 28.
A resolution has been passed unanimously by the Executive of the Institute of Journalists in London expressing surprise and indignation at Panter's arrest.The resolution urges the British Government to make every effort to secure his release.—*British Wireless."SHADOWS BY THE SEA"

Leonard. "Bright flannels are not fit for dark work. Good thing my trunk's turned up—you'll find a nice, sombre suit in that wardrobe."

"You know, you're full of happy ideas," remarked Napoleon, walking towards the wardrobe. "I feel as if I'm dressing for a funeral. The question that's worrying me is—whose funeral?" He paused at the wardrobe door. "Look here, I say, I won't find anything else in this jolly old wardrobe besides your suit, will I?"

"I sincerely hope not," replied Leonard.

"Boo!" called Napoleon, as he swung the door open.

"Ass!" laughed Leonard.

"Granted, but always remembers not a silly ass," said Napoleon, satisfying himself that all was well. "There is method behind most of my madness. I said 'Boo' for two reasons. One was to make you laugh, because I can't stand you when you're serious. And the other was to make sure that if anybody in the wardrobe was going to scare me, I should scare him, too."

While Napoleon Truelove exchanged his happy grey for a more sombre colour, Leonard gathered together a few interesting objects and placed them in a bag. They included, among other things, a strong flash-lamp and a hatchet. "Haven't I seen Luigi chopping wood with that hatchet?" asked Napoleon, curiously.

"Yes, you have," replied Leonard. "In a short while, I expect to be chopping wood with it."

"Oh, yes, of course—that dear little door on the wreck," nodded Napoleon, solemnly. "I say, Sefton, we are going to spend a jolly evening!"

CONSTABLE LOSES SHOES IN CHASE

BOARDS MOVING TRAM TO MAKE ARREST

Charged with stealing a suit of female black silk clothing from 5, Onge Street, So Wing, 26, was fined $100 or two months by Mr. Balfour in the Central Police Court this morning.

Sub-Inspector Smith said the defendant was caught by a Chinese constable in muffs after a long chase along Wellington Street, Queen's Road, and Des Voeux Road Central. The man was eventually caught by the constable aboard a moving tram. In order to gain more speed the constable took off his slippers and when the chase was over, found he had lost them!

AMERICAN NAVAL DESERTER

EXPULSION ORDER MADE

Percival Bowman Wright, aged 34, unemployed American, appeared before Mr. Balfour in the Central Police Court this morning, charged with entering the Colony on or before October 27, without a valid passport. He pleaded guilty and an expulsion order was made.

Detective-Sergeant Mottram said Wright gave himself up at Shatin two or three days ago. He stated he deserted from the U.S. Navy in 1929.

The American Consul has been communicated with but under American law, after two years, they are no longer interested in deserters.

GREAT SHAKESPEAREAN ACTOR'S DEATH

E. H. Sothern American Theatre Idol

New York, Oct. 29.

The death has occurred at the age of 74 of Edward Hugh Sothern, one of America's most famous Shakespearean actors.—Reuter.

The son of Edward A. Sothern, a famous comedian, Edward Hugh received an academic education in England and studied painting in Spain.

He made his first stage appearance in a small part with his father at the Abbey's Park Theatre, New York, in 1879. Later he toured the United States with John McCullough's Company, and also toured England from 1882 to 1883. In 1883 he became leading comedian in the McCullough's Co.

He wrote and played in the farce "Whose Are They?" the following year, and played leading parts in "A Scrap of Paper," "Met by Chance," "Peg Woffington," "The Love Chase" and "One of Our Girls" from 1884 to 1886.

FIRST LEADING ROLE.

He took his first leading role at the Lyceum Theatre, New York on May 23, 1887, when he played as Jack Hamerton in "The Highest Bidder," and subsequently starred with his own company in "Lord Chumley," "The Master of Woodbarrow," "The Prisoner of Zenda," and several other notable plays.

He first played Shakespeare in 1890, when he appeared in "Hamlet," and subsequently he became famous for his characterisations in "Macbeth," "Twelfth Night," "As You Like It," "Merchant of Venice," "Romeo and Juliet" and

NAZI SABOTAGE ATTEMPT

VIENNA RADIO STATION, ATTACKED

Vienna, Oct. 26.

A group of unknown people, believed to be members of the National Socialist Party, last night made an attempt to damage the wireless station at Bismarck, a Vienna suburb. They were, however, prevented from raiding the premises by members of the Austrian auxiliary police, who fired shots at them. The invaders escaped, carrying their wounded comrades with them. Pursuit was organised by the police, but no one was caught.

ELECTION MARRED BY BLOODSHED

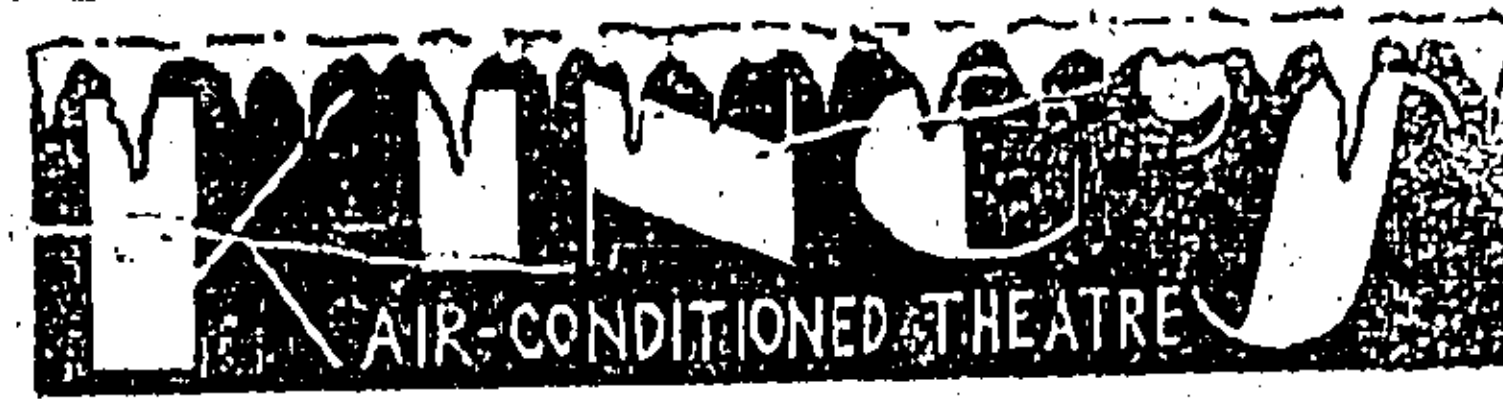

DISTURBANCES IN MADRID

Madrid, Oct. 26.

The Spanish election fight to-day was marred by violent disturbances, the police being obliged in many places in the capital to use their revolvers. Last evening, bloodshed occurred in scuffles between the Socialists and the Extremists of the Left. The list of casualties during the past few days includes several dead and many badly injured people.

"The Taming of the Shrew." He was also a big success in "If I Were King," "John of Arc," "Proud Prince," "Don Quixote," "Much Ado About Nothing," and numerous other productions. In 1896 he married Virginia Harned, his leading lady, and married again in 1911, when his bride was Julia Marlowe.
